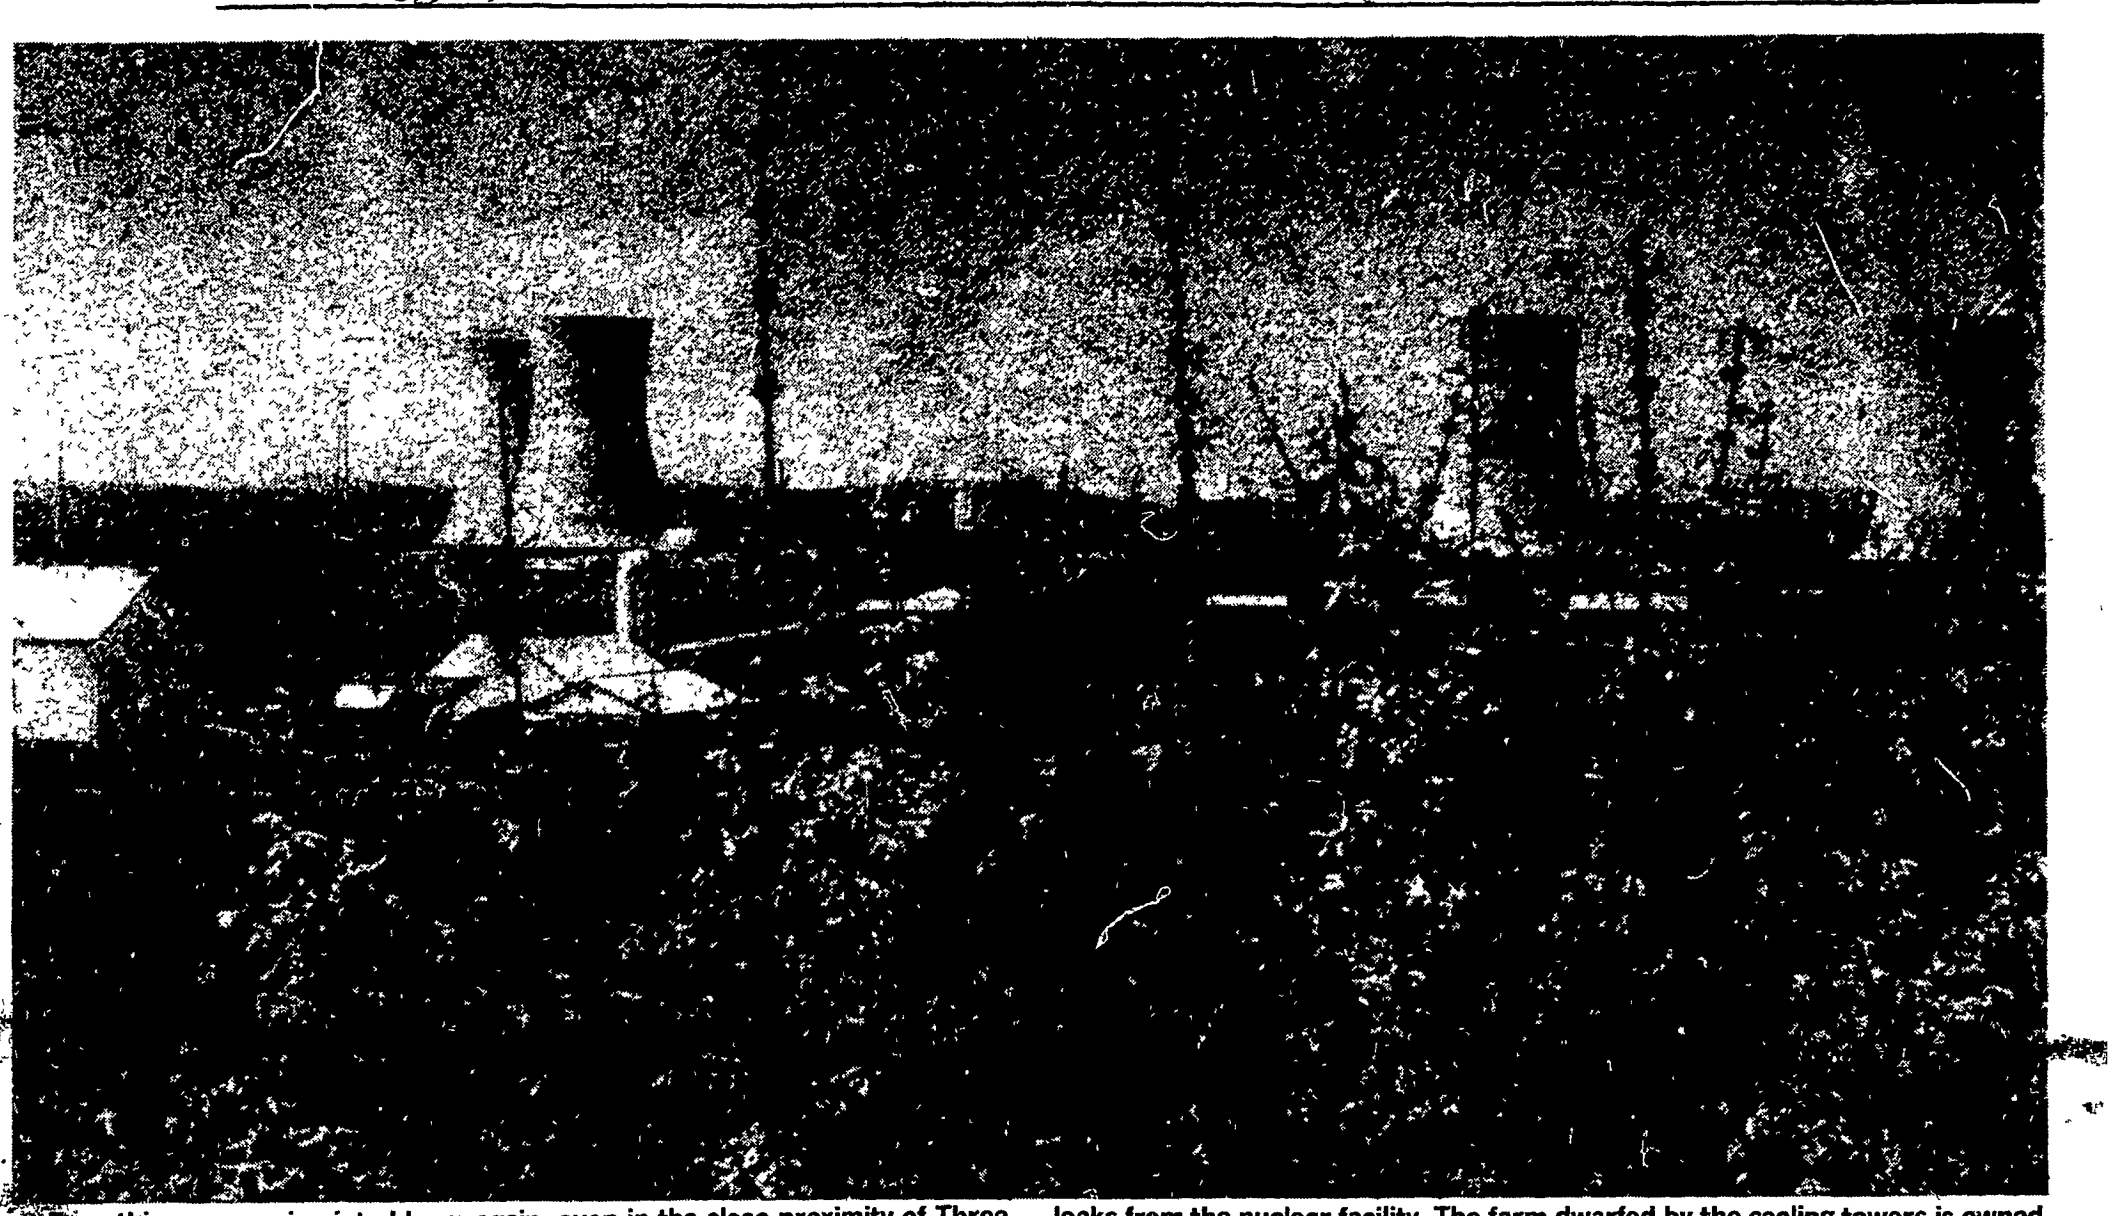
Lancaster Farming

Serving The Central and Southeastern Pennsylvania Areas

VOL. 24 No. 22 24 | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, April 14, 1979 | $6.00 Per Year



Forsythias are coming into bloom again, even in the close proximity of Three Mile Island. Along with the bloosoms comes the good news from officials that Pennsylvania agriculture and its people remained unharmed by the radiation leaks from the nuclear facility. The farm dwarfed by the cooling towers is owned by Robert Gruber.

Milk handlers report steady sales

By DIETER KRIEG

HARRISBURG — Milk coming from dairy farms in southcentral Pennsylvania has been declared safe and according to numerous milk handlers in the region, sales have been normal.

In the wake of what is being considered the nation's worst nuclear accident, Henry R. Geisinger, executive vice president of the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers speculates that some dairies may have been hurt by negative publicity, but all in all sales were not down. Instead, sales just shifted, he said. The reason for the shift is that an estimated 80,000 people had left the Harrisburg area and gone to live elsewhere for a few days. As a result sales of all commodities were down.

"But the demand for milk in the State College, and Williamsport area was tremendous," Geisinger continued, explaining that these towns evidently harbored thousands of evacuees.

In assessing the situation, Geisinger had high praise for Pennsylvania Governor Richard Thornburgh, Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, and Department of Environmental Resources chief Cliff Jones. "They did a great job coordinating monitoring procedures and handling news releases," Geisinger said. "I appreciate the sensible approach taken by the Governor's office. The people trusted him and that is reflected in the dairy industry upholding its sales."

Geisinger is not alone in praising officials in the state capital. Other dairy industry leaders made similar remarks.

Jim Sumner, speaking on behalf of Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative, put it this way: "I think that the positive action taken by Hallowell averted a major economic crisis to dairymen."

Only one of the dairy companies contacted in recent days by Lancaster Farming indicated that they had lost a significant number of sales as a result of the nuclear accident on Three Mile Island.

Paul Meckley, spokesman for Harrisburg Dairies, was the exception to the rule. He reported some resistance on the part of consumers and guessed it may have been

Fewer feeder cattle seen at Va. auctions

By KENDACE BORRY

RICHMOND, Va. — "There are as many feeder steer sales as normal, there are just less cattle being sold." That's the way Mike Carpenter, market development, Virginia Department of Agriculture, Division of Markets, explained it. "The special sales started March 28 and will continue to run through April 24, with there being 24 of them in all—especially for feeder steers and heifers. A couple of sales have had pretty good numbers, but the numbers are down at the smaller sales.

But, he further explained, it's part of that by-now familiar story of cattle numbers being down everywhere. "There just aren't as many cattle around," he commented. "There aren't as many breeding cows or feeder cattle."

He related that prices for 500 to 700 pound choice and fancy steers are ranging from 85 cents to a dollar a pound. The same grade heifer, at the same weight, is bringing 75 to 85 cents per pound.

This, he added, is the highest price that cattle have ever brought.

Feeder cattle suppliers are generally happy about the prices, stating that profits are up, despite the smaller number of cattle being sold. Part of the reason cattle supplies have been dwindling has been because of the herd reductions made due to the poor economics of raising cattle in the past few years.

Carpenter stated that as of this past week, prices at the sales were going higher every day, and these prices being received for cattle now, may be the highest for the year.

Reggie Reynolds, Baleville, Va., executive secretary of the Virginia Beef Cattle Association, sees a 15 per cent reduction in the number of feeder cattle being sold this year. And this shorter supply of cattle will continue for the next two years, he reasoned.

At Pennfield, we formulate feeds and feeding programs with your profit in mind.

"All feed companies are alike."

If you believe that statement, you could be missing an opportunity to increase your output of eggs, pork or milk—without increasing your costs.

At Pennfield, our basic goal is to help our customers make more money. We believe we can accomplish this for you, too. For these reasons:

• Customized feeding programs. We specifically tailor a program to your operation, not to an "operation like yours."

• Nutritionally-superior feeds. We go a step beyond many conventional feeds. Our feeds have Optimum Nutrient Density (most profitable nutrient level per pound of feed) and contain high-quality protein for balanced amino acid nutrition.

• Quality in, quality out. We chemically analyze all incoming feed grains for pesticide residues and toxins... and all finished feeds for overall quality and nutrient content.

• Technical service. We're responsive to your needs—by phone or on your farm.

• A local company. We buy our feed grains locally; shipping savings are passed on to customers. Our feeding programs are developed based on local conditions. We do test work and field trials based on local conditions.

These and other Pennfield advantages are helping hundreds of new customers increase their profits. We can do the same for you. But you must take the first step by phoning or writing us. Do it today.

Omaha Cattle

Thurs., April 12, 1979

Closing prices on slaughter steers and heifers were 1.50-2.25 higher with trading an aggressive affair for numbers each day. Cows were 1.00-1.50 higher, bulls mostly steady. Fleshy two-way steers were 1.50-2.50 higher.

The upward spiral in fed cattle prices continued with most buying interests aggressive for numbers to meet immediate requirements for a short week as many slaughterers will observe a non-slaughter holiday on Good Friday. One major buying interest returned to operation after a month's absence because of labor difficulties. The advance in live prices was partially supported by higher carcass prices, but cut-out ratios were still not considered favorable. Feeder buyers were still competitive for steers suitable for a short turn in the feedlot. Steers made up approximately 40 pct., heifers 37 pct., cows 9 pct., and feeders 11 pct.

Those puffs of radiation may have made us more aware of our blessings, as well as our shortcomings. If Three Mile Island taught us anything, it should simply be that God's creations are fragile and need to be respected.

COMMENTS

By DIETER KRIEG, EDITOR

After much negative publicity regarding the nuclear mishap on Three Mile Island, it was thrilling to hear a White House proclamation last week which emphasized that Pennsylvania's agricultural products are as safe as ever. That's the kind of boost we needed to regain the confidence of consumers, some of whom were questioning the wholesomeness of the foods they buy. This thoughtfulness from President Carter deserves a sincere thank you and a note of praise.

Also speaking on the farmers' behalf was Governor Thornburgh who spoke reassuringly even after minute traces of iodine were found in milk. Cautious in his approach from the very beginning, the Governor provided information tempered with reason rather than emotion. This is a credit to him, as well as cabinet officers who worked closely with him throughout the ordeal. Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell and Secretary of Environmental Resources Cliff Jones certainly need to be included in any notes of praise and thanks.

Continuing with the distribution of bouquets, thanks once more to President Carter for indicating that there is reason to suspect that the news media overreacted to the events on Three Mile Island. That's the consensus of quite a few people and for President Carter to make a statement to that effect is indeed newsworthy.

And certainly, thanks to all - above all, God - for seeing us through the situation safely. Hundreds of people dedicated countless hours towards a solution of the problem, and while we can't name them, none should be without our respect.

In the final analysis, let us not forget that no one was seriously injured as far as is known. Not a soul was lost, and despite the inconveniences and genuine concerns, tangible property damage outside of Three Mile Island appears to be virtually non-existent.

That's not to say that the radiation leak was nothing to be concerned about.

But let us not forget that we have much to be thankful for. And yes, let's remember that we had much reason for gratitude long before the unfortunate accident on Three Mile Island.

Those puffs of radiation may have made us more aware of our blessings, as well as our shortcomings. If so, it's a mark in our favor.

Perhaps we will all be a little wiser for what happened on Three Mile Island during the first weeks of Spring 1979. Scientists, and even you and I will undoubtedly learn something from it. Man has a history of learning from his mistakes and overcoming ignorance. That trend didn't end in the Susquehanna River.

The escalator towards more knowledge will continue to move and regardless of whether one is for or against nuclear power, the wheels of progress will continue to turn. Where it will all end is a source of wonder and sometimes even fright. But it would be wrong, I think, to focus all our fears on a nuclear reactor.

Admittedly, I shudder to think what radiation could do to my children. Heaven forbid that anyone be harmed by it, from whatever source. But I'm even more concerned about the destruction - both mental and physical - that's represented by people hooked on drugs and alcohol and the greed for money. While mankind may have harnessed the atom, he has not conquered the roots of evil which are known to destroy body, mind, and soul.

And cigarette smoke - that stuff is pure murder to a lof of peoples' throats and lungs!

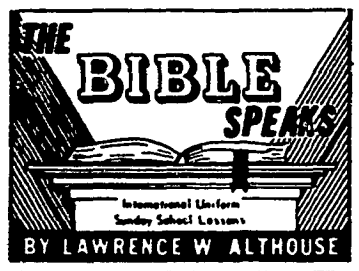
If Three Mile Island has taught us anything, it should simply be that God's creations are fragile and they are to be respected. Nothing is totally safe or foolproof.

Consider water, for example. You can't possibly live without it. But a few gulps can kill you. A little match is something no one would want to be without. But a careless user can make you wish it was never invented. And worst of all, man himself has the capability to do wondrous things. But a mind lacking moral standards and warped by drugs or greed or alcohol is the ultimate insult and threat to society.

The tiny atom, like anything else, has its beneficial side, I believe. And radiation, though it may frighten us, is natural. It comes forth from sun and even rocks. It's also beaming out from television sets and watch dials that glow in the dark. In fact, it's streaming out of this video display terminal into which I'm programming these words. The intent and hope is that no person receives more radiation than is safe.

And so, while the giant cooling towers on Three Mile Island are thought of us a huge mistake by some folks, others see them as the triumphant pillars of the future.

The truth lies somewhere between those two extremes. Like everything else - from fire to fertilizer, to drops of water and peoples' minds - there is a delicate balance involved that must be understood and respected.



EASTER'S "THEREFORE"

Lesson for April 15, 1979

Background Scripture:
1 Corinthians 15.
Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 15:51-58.

Some years ago I saw a church bulletin board with the pastor's Easter Sunday sermon title: "Christ Is Risen!" Someone had used a piece of soap to write on the glass this response: "SO WHAT?"

Actually, it was a rather appropriate question. Perhaps we have too often proclaimed Christ's resurrection without spelling out sufficiently the "so what?" that goes with it. Is the resurrection simply a happy ending for the gospel story, or is it an event that has some lasting effect upon our lives?

This Life Only?

Paul realized that the foundation of the Good News is the resurrection of our Lord and what that event means for us. There are people today who assume that they can have a Christianity without having to accept the resurrection. But Paul knows that without the resurrection, there is no Good News. So, to the Corinthians, he wrote: "If Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is in vain and your faith is in vain . . . Then those who have falled asleep in Christ have perished. If for this life only we have hoped in Christ, we are of all men most to be pitied" (15:14,18,19). The Gospel, he says, rises or falls on the resurrection.

If life is to have any meaning, there must be something beyond this earthly existance. Theologian John Cobb has said: "Personal existance can matter ultimately, only if it matters everlastingly." So, to the question of "So what?" we must answer that, because there is a life beyond, the quality of the life here and now can be radically transformed. The significance of the Easter faith is not just that Jesus was victorious over death, but that his victory points the way for our own victory. Thus, the Christian's celebration does not mean simply, "Christ is risen – good for him!" but "Christ is risen – good for us!"

Never In Vain

The whole 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians is a stirring treatise on Christ's resurrection and ours. The climax comes as he sings:

"Death is swallowed up in victory." "O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?" The sting of death is sin and the power of sin is the law. But thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Ah yes, the "victory"! And then what? Paul follows with the most convincing "therefore" that words can convey: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that in the Lord your labor is not in vain" (15:58). Because Christ was victorious, I know that I can be victorious too. And because I can be victorious over death, I can also be victorious in the midst of life.

NOW IS THE TIME

TO PROCEED NORMALLY

The recent nuclear situation at Three Mile Island will be a topic for discussion for months to come. It is easy to understand that many gardeners and farmers will be concerned about the amount of fallout in the soil; numerous phone calls at our Extension Office have inquired about their Spring plantings. To the best of our knowledge the radioactive fallout has not been to the extent of causing any danger to our crops. The monitoring teams have been very active and have not found amounts more than normal. Therefore, I'd suggest that we proceed with our Spring plantings as in former years. The advertising that condemns Pennsylvania products, because of the nuclear situation, is regrettable and without facts.

TO BEWARE OF WILD GARLIC

The pasture season is approaching when many herds and flocks will be grazing. This is the time when dairymen must be very careful about off-flavored milk. Milking cows should be kept off lush pastures at least four hours before the milking period. If the area contains wild garlic, milking cows should not be grazed. This will certainly produce onion-flavored milk and be the reason for rejection. These areas should be grazed by dry cows or young stock. Wild garlic control is difficult but sprays earlier in the Spring using 2, 4-D will help keep it under control.

NOW IS THE TIME TO APPLY YOUR SOIL CONDITIONER

THIS SOIL CONDITIONER is an organic material which improves soil texture so that water, fertilizer, and air can reach the root system. In this way, it assists the growth of healthier, more vigorous plants with stronger and deeper root systems. (Due to merger of Arobic Research and Marketing, new label will read as follows: Agri II Soil Conditioner).

Since SOIL CONDITIONER improves soil texture and water penetration, root development also improves. Root growth goes deeper into the subsoil for stored moisture and minerals. Roots produce more fine roots and root hairs, which allows roots more places to take up nutrients in the soil.

The now available nutrients in the soil are due in part to increased soil life. Because SOIL CONDITIONER has helped to cause an increase in soil life, there are now more available nutrients in the soil. Let SOIL CONDITIONER LEND "a helping hand" in your soil and water management.

AEROBIC RESEARCH & MARKETING, INC. SOIL CONDITIONER University test plots, independent research, and farmers' observations have shown that Ammonium Laureth Sulfate (Ammonium Alkyl Ether Sulfate) greatly improves soil and water management.

NO NEED TO CLEAN UP YOUR HERBICIDE EQUIPMENT.

WE HAVE OUR OWN SPRAYING EQUIPMENT TO SERVICE THE FARMER.

When you shortchange their nutrition, you shortchange yourself.

Looking for ways to cut on down on out-of-pocket feed costs without cutting down on milk production?

Cutting production costs will backfire if you end up shortchanging your herd's nutrition in the process.

But you can cut those costs safely by feeding homegrown grains and grain silage fortified with the right Vigortone Dairy Pre-Mix. These potent pre-mixes contain the proper levels of vitamins, calcium, phosphorus, and other minerals needed to balance your farm's feedstuffs.

Vigortone Dairy Pre-Mixes can be mixed in or metered on any palatable grain or roughage. This lets you change ration content to fit the supplies you have on hand without risking herd performance.

Better herd nutrition means a bigger milk check. Minimum out-of-pocket feed costs mean more in your pocket.

Your figures will prove it.

Dry cow nutrition pays future profits.

Shortchanging your dry cow's nutrition can be risky too. Most problems dairymen experience in getting cows back in the string can be traced to careless treatment during the dry pericd.

Keep them in top condition until their next lactation. To help you do it, Vigortone has developed unique dairy pre-mixes specially concentrated for dry cow rations.

Now is the time to compare.

See your Vigortone dealer soon. He's ready to compare the performance of Vigortone's cost-saving dairy feeding programs with any other you name.

Pa. Dept. of Ag. officers named

HARRISBURG - H. Francis Kennedy, 60, Butler R6; and Dean R. Heim, 44, Pitman, have been appointed administrative officers of the Region 4 and Region 7 Office of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, respectively. The appointment was made by State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell. They assumed their new duties with the Department on March 28.

Hallowell said he was pleased that the men had accepted the appointment. He cited their varied agricultural and public service background as a positive factor in his selection to fill the position.

The men will be responsible for the day to day operations of their offices and will supervise the field staff who operate out of the office.

Kennedy was raised on a farm, and worked in a partnership with his father on the family dairy farm. He bought the farm partnership in 1949 and has since continued as a dairyman with registered Brown Swiss cattle.

He was elected to the State House of Representatives in 1962 and served in the General Assembly for twelve years. During his tenure in the House, he served as both Minority and Majority Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. He was the prime sponsor of the "Clean and Green Act of 1973," which provides for property tax assessments based on use value for farmland and forestland.

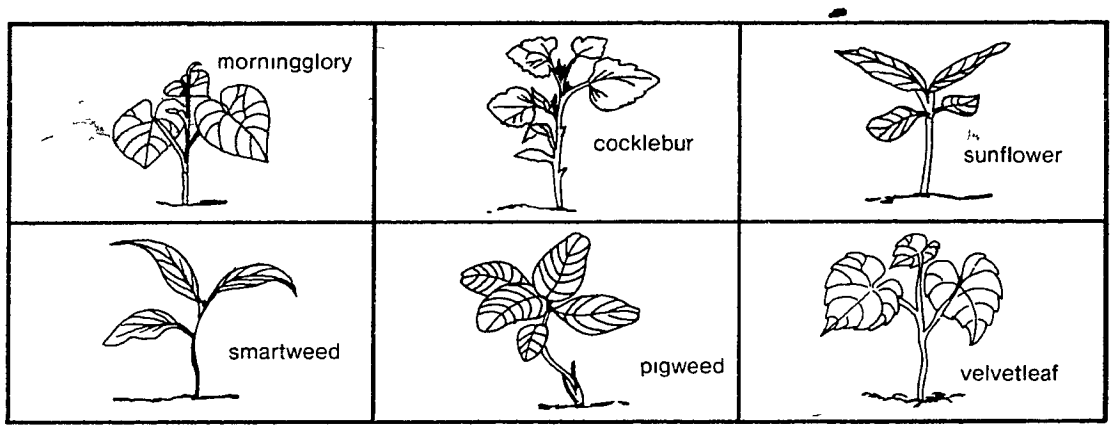
Kennedy is Vice-President and Director of the All-American Dairy Show and Chairman of the Agricultural Committee for the State Grange. He has been active in Extension, serving as President, Vice-President and Treasurer of the County Extension Committee. He has been a director of the Purebred Dairy Cattle Association, and the Western Pennsylvania Atlantic Breeders Cooperative. He served as an elder and head of the Stewardship Committee at his church in Mars.

Heim graduated from Hegins Township (now Tri-Valley) High School in 1952.

Heim is the owner and operator of the Ch-La-Dean Farms in Pitman. His business consists of raising beef, vegetables and fruit, which he delivers weekly to approximately 400 retail and wholesale customers. He has been self-employed for 22 years.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, the F & M Valley Lodge 797, a member of the Shenandoah Amvets and is a director fo teh Mahatango Ambulance Association and the Mahatango Fire Company.

Pick the weeds in your corn you'd like to get rid of...



Then pick Banvel® herbicide... the Big Plus...to do the job.

Pre-emergence: Banvel tank-mixed with *Lasso® to get broadleaf weeds along with grasses...ready and waiting when later weeds germinate.

Early layby (in corn up to five inches high): use Banvel at a one pint rate. Stop weeds before they've had a chance to develop. This Banvel overlay controls cocklebur, sunflower, annual morningglory, other troublemakers.

Post-emergence (corn up to 36 inches): Banvel herbicide controls the real problems—like smartweed, velvetleaf, bindweed, and seedling Canada thistle.

Before buying a less adaptable herbicide that may be short on performance, check out the Big Plus of Banvel...from Velsicol.

COST

CUTTER

The cost of diesel fuel has jumped nearly 110 percent since October, 1973 and it's still about three cents a gallon cheaper than gasoline. Higher fuel costs call for a closer look at total operating costs when you buy engines. Deutz air-cooled engines use 20 to 40 percent less fuel than most water-cooled diesel engines - far less than gasoline engines. And they are competitively priced. So hadn't you better buy or specify the cost cutter - Deutz? 10 to 500 bhp.

Today there are more competitive brands of air cooled diesels on the market than ever before — yet we doubled our sales in the last two years — which says it all about public acceptance of Deutz diesels.

DEUTZ
AIR-COOLED DIESEL

- We stock rebuilt: starters, generators, injectors, for Deutz
- We have complete road service since 1955
- We supply free application engineering
- We have facilities for any mechanical fabrication required to apply new Deutz diesels.

Water samples show no evidence of radiation

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Geologic Survey recently issued the following joint statement:

"The state and federal governments have been doing extensive testing to determine if the accident at Three Mile Island has resulted in the contamination of surface and ground water.

"During the past two weeks, we have collected and analyzed more than 300 samples of drinking water and water from rivers, streams and the ground. In each case, no radioactivity was detected.

"The samples were collected by the Department of Environmental Resources, the U.S. Geologic Survey and water suppliers. They were analyzed by the Environmental Protection Agency here and at its laboratory in Montgomery, Ala.

"DER has been taking daily samples at four locations on the Susquehanna River downstream from Three Mile Island. All results have been negative.

"We have analyzed samples from all 21 public water suppliers within a 20 mile radius of the plant that draw their water from surface sources. All results have been below minimum detectable levels.

"We have analyzed samples from 37 public water supplies that draw their water from wells. All results have been below minimum detectable levels. This indicates that there has been no pollution of ground water and that individuals who have water wells have nothing to worry about. Selected water supplies beyond the 20 mile radius are presently being collected to obtain further background data.

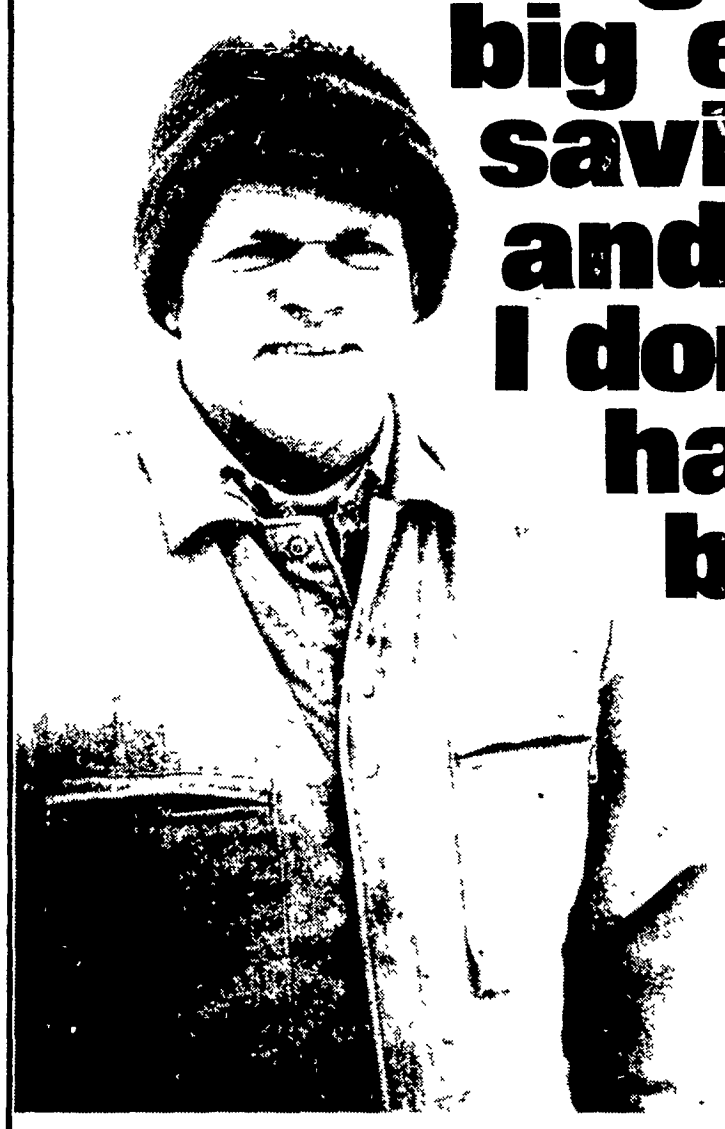
"Waste discharge samples are being collected daily from Three Mile Island. All results so far show the discharge from the plant is within limits set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

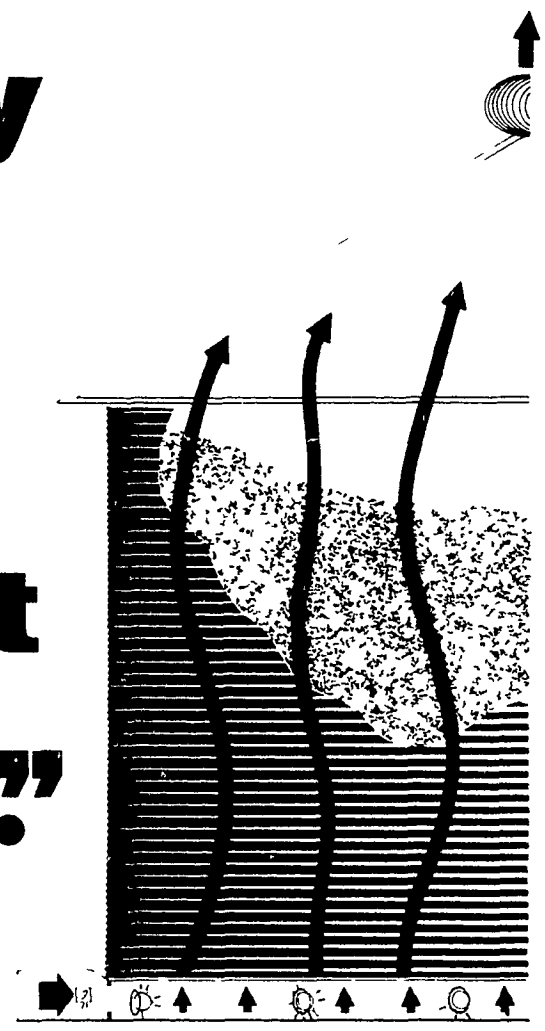
"The Environmental Protection Agency has agreed to provide a monitor that will give continuous readings on the levels of radioactive iodine being discharged, so any increase can be detected immediately.

"The Pennsylvania Fish Commission will be collecting fish from the river this week to be analyzed. The commission has also helped us collect samples of the plant's discharge."

"Harvestall Chillcuring™ works.

I get big energy savings and I don't have to babysit a dryer."





DAN KOLB, Spring City, Pa.

This is my third year with the Harvestall system, and I've found it to be ideal for my setup. I've harvested corn at 30% with no problem. The thing I really like about the Harvestall is that I don't have to babysit a dryer. I can fill it and forget it. Plus there are really no major moving parts to wear out or break down.

"I can cure down 26%-30% corn for around 6¢ to 8¢ a bushel. 24%-25% would run considerably less.

"The way the Harvestall works is simple and effective. As for those who are skeptical, it's like the bumble bee: according to scientists he's not supposed to be able to fly. But he's too dumb to know it, so he flies anyway. So regardless of what anyone says, the Harvestall system works. It works for me and I'm happy with it. I do recommend the Harvestall for its economy and for its considerable savings on energy."

The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter You'll never see white dust in chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no oil or gas to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a "back-to-basics" system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

Which way are land prices headed?

UNIVERSITY PARK - Land has been one of the stars in recent years in terms of an investment that has kept pace with inflation.

However, one of the principal investors in farm land in the past few years has been operating farmers. The high yields and favorable prices for crops have caused farmers to bid land to high levels, points out Fred A. Hughes, Extension farm management specialist at the Pennsylvania State University.

In many areas of the country, farm real estate prices reached levels that make it very difficult and often impossible to pay for the land with the product from it, he notes. There are now 11 states where the average per acre value of farm real estate exceeds $1000.

"Seven of these states are located in the northeastern United States and Pennsylvania is one of them. The average real estate value in the state is now nearly 2 and one half times the March 1972 value," says Hughes.

"Land values across the nation are still rising, but at a much slower rate. From February 1977 to November 1977, farm real estate values in the 48 original states increased only 5 per cent and in Pennsylvania only 3 per cent," Hughes points out.

Does this mean the end of rapidly rising land values? In many aras of the country where land values are supported by the crops produced, there already has been a reduction in land prices. Unless there is a strong upturn in crop prices that reduction may well continue.

In the long run, land prices tend to adjust toward the productive value of the land. However, there are many factors which tend to slow or counter the forces that normally would move land values lower, the specialist notes.

These include the rate of inflation, declining value of the dollar, uncertainty about the future, and the fact that land is a fixed commodity with limited supply. All of these forces tend to exert greater pressure on land in heavily populated regions than in rural areas.

"In view of these factors, average farm real estate values in the Northeast will probably continue to rise at rates that will be near the rate of inflation, the farm management specialist predicts.

Denton praised for TMI work

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Congressman Bob Walker (R-16-PA) recently introduced a resolution in the House of Representatives highly praising the head of all federal efforts during the recent Three Mile Island nuclear crisis, Dr. Harold Denton.

"When the unexpected nuclear crisis at Three Mile Island occurred, the immediate result was massive confusion, conflicting information and a near total disruption of the daily lives of area residents," Walker said.

"The arrival on-site of Dr. Denton immediately improved the situation through his top notch technical expertise and his ability to communicate," he continued.

Denton, who directs the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation, was dispatched to the Three Mile Island facility by President Carter on March 30. Since his arrival he has taken charge of all technical procedures to bring the nuclear reactor under control as well as assumed primary responsibility for public information.

"My constituents and many others were understandably frightened and anxious during the early period of this crisis.

"Dr. Denton not only earned their respect but he has proven himself to be an official deserving of the public trust through his straightforward approach to keeping the public accurately informed," Walker said.

"I think it most appropriate that Congress should recognize what so many Americans have recognized already – that Dr. Denton's hard work, dedication and commitment to the public interest have contributed immensely to easing a very dangerous and unprecedented situation," he concluded.

will be cleaned out in the next month. We repeat the suggestion that this material be either injected into the ground or incorporated with the topsoil within a few days after application. This will not only preserve more fertilizer elements but will reduce odors and preserve good public relations with your neighbors. Discing, chiseling, or plowing after the waste application is strongly recommended. Farm manure has considerable fertilizer value when applied into the soil without much weathering. We urge local farmers and citizens to recognize this organic fertilizer and utilize it fully.

TO PRACTICE WEED CONTROL

This is easy to say but very difficult to attain. For generations gardeners and farmers have been battling weeds each year and the struggle continues. However, with every planting we urge folks to keep in mind the weed control materials and practices for that particular crop. It will vary between crops and stages of maturity. The important thing is to recognize the great value of good weed control and then make every effort to get the job done. Follow instructions as to rate and time of application. Most weeds are much easier to kill when they are small. For home gardens we continue to feed that mechanical cultivation is the best. Many garden vegetables are susceptible to weed sprays and will be injured along with the weeds. Don't allow weeds to reduce your yields this Summer.

Stauffer Homestead shows champion feeder pigs

NEW HOLLAND — A pen of eight crossbred feeder pigs bred at Stauffer Homestead Farms of East Earl R1 was awarded the grand champion trophy at Tuesday's Third Annual Feeder Pig Show and Sale. It was held at the New Holland Sales Stables, here, which co-sponsored the event along with the Lancaster County Swine Producers Association.

Weighing an average of 65 pounds per head, Stauffer Homestead's pigs were also the heavyweight champions. Judge for the competition, which featured close to 300 pigs, was Ronnie Harrison of Littlestown. The champion received a trophy and $50; the reserve champions was awarded a trophy and $40. First place entries in their division received cash prizes, and the top five in each weight group were given ribbons.

With hog producers arriving from several counties in Pennsylvania and Maryland, the sale started promptly at 7 o'clock. H.D. Matz, New Holland dairy cattle dealer offered the highest price during the first round of bidding, thus repreating his distinction as buyer of the champion from the previous year. His record bid of $535 allowed him to have the pig of his choice from the champion lot shown by Stauffer Homestead Farms.

Spirited bidding continued before auctioneer Abe Diffenbach dropped the gavel at $85. Buyer again was H.D. Matz.

The Cloister FFA Chapter of Ephrata, represented by vocational agriculture instructor Lewis C. Ayers had the next successful bid at $80. W.E. Kreider, butcher for Stauffer's of Kissel Hill, was the fourth successful bidder and took his choice. With four champion-pen entries left in the ring, Diffenbach accepted bids rapidly until they stopped at $75. The Cecil County Livestock Club chose to pay that amount for each of the remaining four.

Showing the reserve champion pen was Bill Smiley of Middletown, N.Y., whose eight porkers were judged tops in the middleweight groupings. They weighed an average of 46 pounds each. Kelly Bowser of Worthington, Pa. paid $63 for his choice of one of the entries in Smiley's pen. W.E. Kreider purchased the remaining seven at $57 a piece.

First place in the lightweight division was Little Piggy Hill Farms of Watkins Glen R2, N.Y. Their entries weighed an average of 39 pounds each. Bill Langwise paid $70 for one of those feeder pigs. Second choice went to Melissa Gruber of Elm. She had bid $57 for one. The remaining six head went for $35 each to Henry Zook of Kinzer.

John Lindenlauf, Coatesville R2, had the second place pigs in the heavyweight division. Buying them were Melissa Gruber (one pig for $54) and Henry Zook (the remaining seven for $52 each).

Second place in the mediumweight class went to John Groff of Lancaster. The Bucks County 4-H Livestock Club bid $76 and paid that for each of three of their choice. A fourth animal in the group was sold to the Cloister FFA Chapter for $61. Alan Risser of

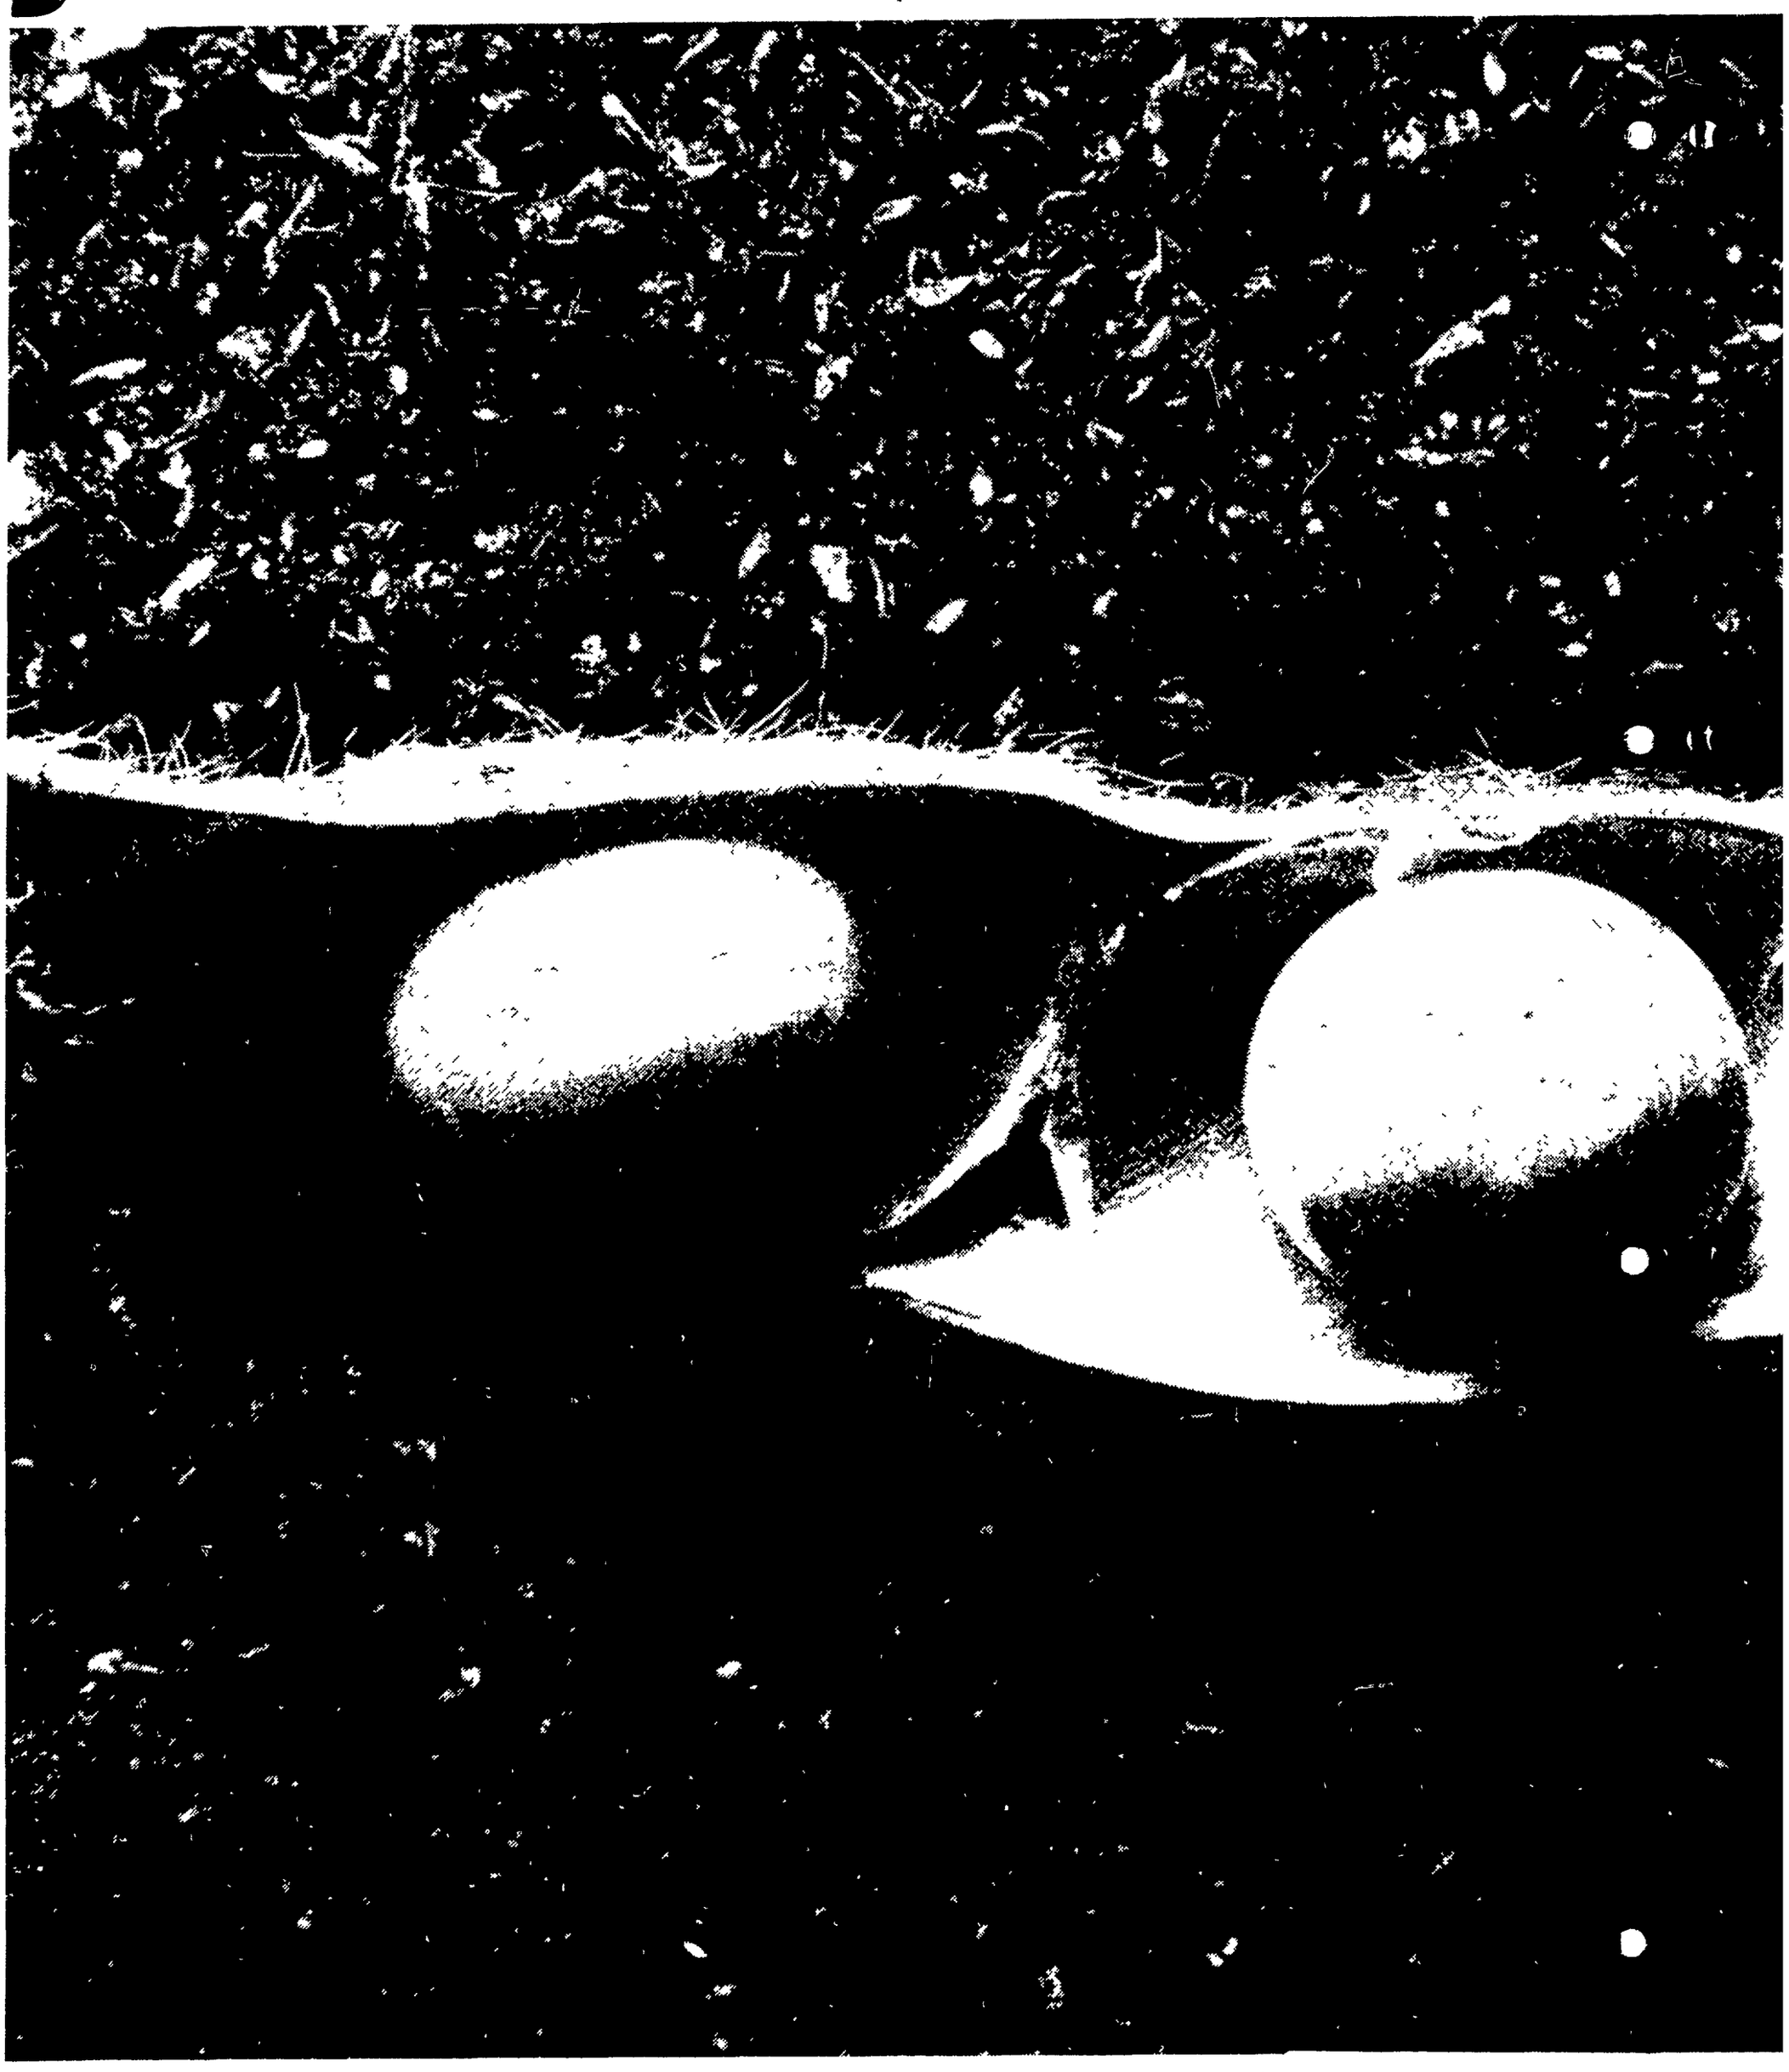
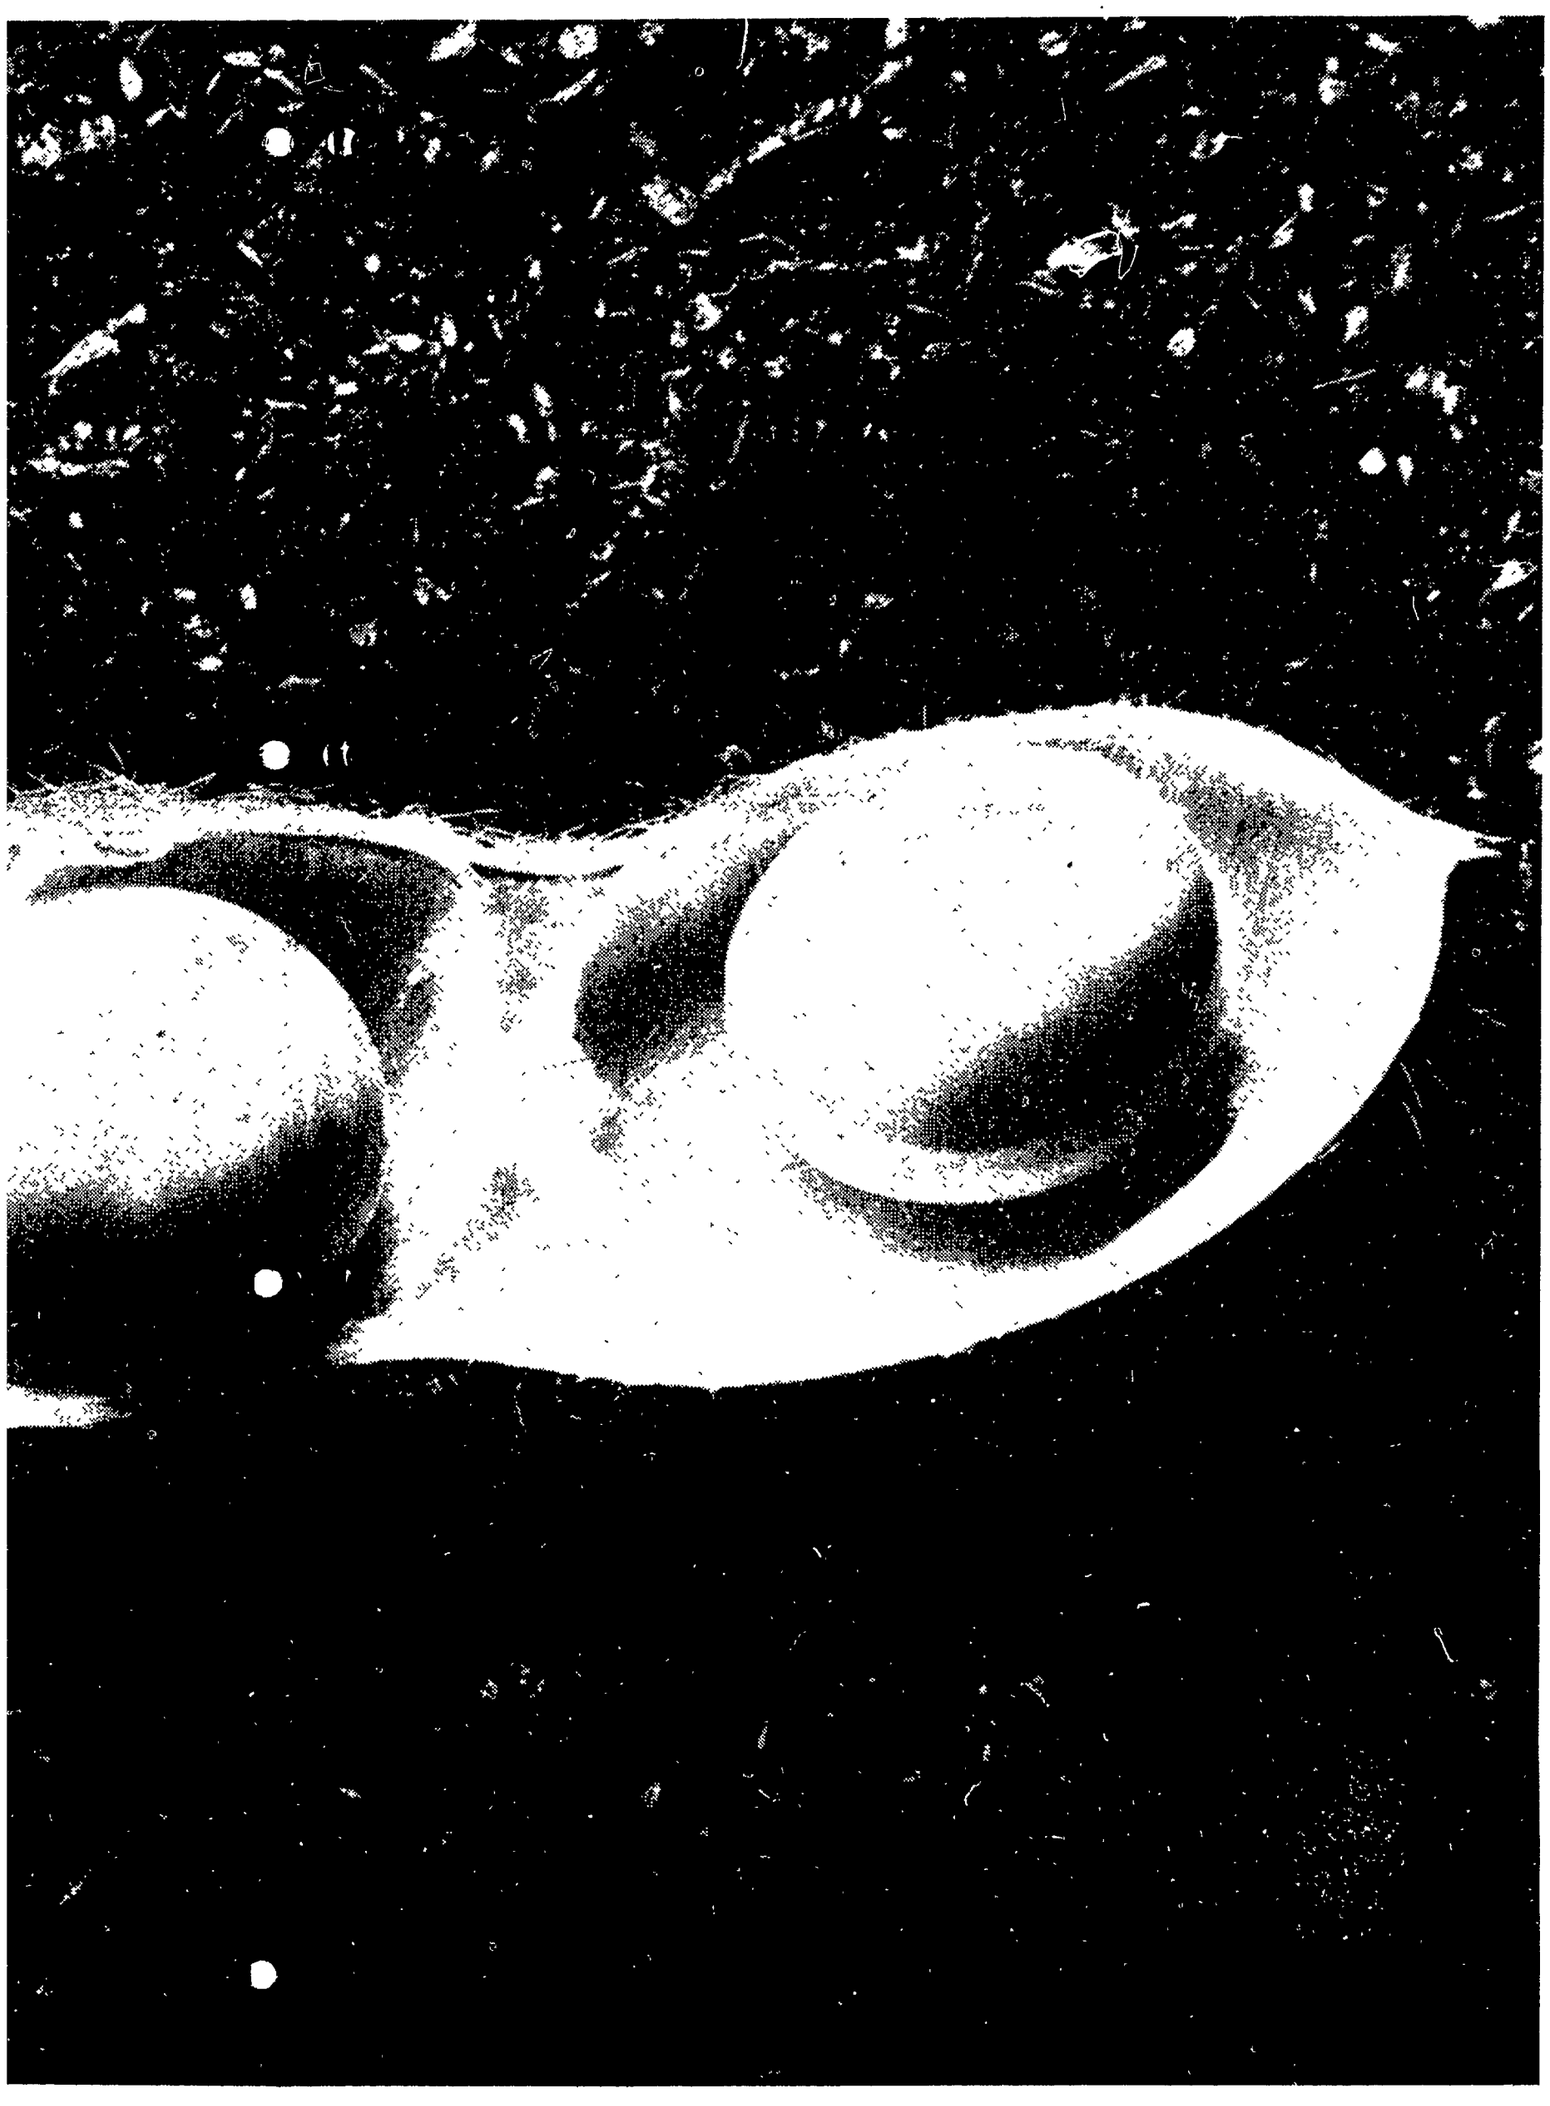
Anyone who th just for corn does



...o thinks Mocap® is ...oesn't know beans.



If you're growing soybeans, chances are your soil is infested with nematodes. These pests are present in damaging populations in a high percentage of fields where soybeans are planted.

And although these creatures are too tiny to be seen, the damage they inflict can not only be seen, it can be felt—right in the wallet.

According to extension specialists, nematodes can rob soybean growers of 15 to 20 bushels per acre. But you can prevent this loss. Simply band Mocap on the row and incorporate according to directions on the label. Then let Mocap go to work to control root-knot, sting, lance and cyst nematodes before they take control of your crops.

Maybe it's time you put Mocap to work for you in your soybeans.

well for Pensupreme Dairies of Lancaster, according public relations manager Nancy Frankhouser. "Sales were down in the immediate area, but up elsewhere," she acknowledged. "There was nothing wrong with the milk, and in fact, we had very few customer inquiries. We just kept a very close watch on the milk. Our major concern was how the tests were going to show up," she concluded.

Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell confirmed the feelings of dairy owners and industry leaders. Said he:

"The problem was not what we feared it would be. Milk has been selling better than was feared. Every farmer is selling all his milk."

The most critical moments of the drama came Monday night when traces of radioactive iodine 131 were found in milk, Hallowell revealed. Earlier press releases had continually reported that milk contained no traces of radiation. When the change in test results was noted, Hallowell called in some 20 industry leaders and a decision was made on how best to tell the facts without causing unnecessry alarm. There was no need to be overly concerned and Hallowell wanted to maintain stability and integrity.

Reports coming from the Department of Environmental Resources fortified dairy industry leaders' hopes that milk continued to be safe. David Milne, spokesman for DER, told Lancaster Farming in an interview yesterday that the highest levels of radioactive iodine ever found in milk as a result of the Three Mile Island incident was 30 picocuries per liter. It had been reported last week that levels of up to 41 picocuries were found, but a second check proved the first figures were too high. Currently, levels of 10 picocuries or less are being detected per liter of milk that is brought in from within a 5-mile radius of the TMI nuclear plant. That compares with some 400 picocuries per liter found in samples taken after the Chinese dropped an atomic bomb in 1976. Scientists say milk would have to contain 12,000 picocuries per liter before it is deemed unsafe for drinking.

Testing of milk began before noon the day of the accident (March 28), Milne revealed. Milk samples were taken daily from 28 farms and dairies in the area. DER's radiation testing laboratory in Harrisburg was running 24 hours a day.

Bill Foust, chief of the Division of Milk Sanitation, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, says: "I'm quite elated that we have gotten through like we have. I suspect it could have been worse. But the milk is entirely safe." His only complaint about it all was that the news reports in out-of-state regions had blown the story all out of proportion. "The stories were horrendous away from here," he concluded.

Although milk is still being tested regularly, and probably will be for months to come, the volume of milk

(Turn to Page 38)

No trace of radioactivity has been found in milk coming from Richard Alwine's farm. This week he and his wife were tested to determine what levels of radiation their bodies might have absorbed. No abnormal amounts of radiation were detected. The Alwine dairy farm is the closest of any to Three Mile Island. Alwine and his wife never left the property during the entire time that the nuclear drama unfolded.

Energy, regional marketing studied at conference

CHERRY HILL, N.J. – Energy and regional marketing problems facing Northeastern agriculture came into focus here last week as more than 300 delegates to the Northeast Agricultural Leadership Assembly began serious discussions aimed at developing policy recommendations for government and research.

Recognition of energy as a major problem for Northeastern agriculture could be seen in the overflow crowd which debated policy recommendations throughout the day David Pimentel, of Cornell University said that during the often heated discussions, major policy recommendations were honed from a list of 26 submitted for consideration.

"The Northeastern states and the federal government should adopt policies to stimulate all phases of the food production, processing, distribution and marketing chain," Pimentel said. "The members of the policy workshop voted overwhelmingly in favor of this recommendation as a means to conserve energy while developing new techniques and also improving the competitive position of regional agriculture."

Penrose Hallowell, Pennsylvania's Agriculture Secretary noted that the themes discussed in the workshops on energy and production overlapped. Hallowell said that the major thrust of production discussions was aimed at "the adoption of strong promotional programs to encourage the purchase of regionally produced agricultural products, as a means to both conserve energy and improve the economic condition of Northeastern farmers."

Hallowell said that discussions on marketing followed similar trends, focusing on the need to improve regional marketing practices, and promotion of local and regional food production and distribution. "This should help the Northeast become more self-sufficient. Encouraging state agencies to adopt policies of buying state and regionally produced products is another way to safeguard our economic interests," he added.

Vermont Agriculture Commissioner William H. Darrow, Jr. echoed the regional theme expressed in the discussions. He noted the division of interest between production issues and issues pertaining to rural life.

"Of greatest importance to the delegates meeting on rural life issues was the fact that the Coalition of Northeastern Governors, who sponsored this Assembly, should continue its efforts to develop a regional rural policy aimed at giving the people living in rural areas a voice in determining local goals," Darrow said. "The problems which affect farmers and rural residents are distinctive. Policy makers should not assume that actions which are effective in meeting urban and suburban problems will also solve rural problems."

Delegates to the Northeast Agricultural Leadership Assembly will continue debate on issues through Thursday when specific recommendations on varied phases of Northeast agriculture will be presented.

Worms Are Stealing Your Milk

Break the worm cycle with

BAYMIX FROM AGWAY

More than ninety percent of all dairy cows are worm-infested It's true Researchers have found worms in nine out of ten dairy cows inspected With these odds, chances are your herd has worms (internal parasites)

Worms can cost you money by reducing...

- milk production potential
- feed efficiency
- growth of replacement animals

BAYMIX is the "Dollars and Sense" wormer. Here's why:

- There is no milk withdrawal with Baymix so you can worm the whole herd at one time milking cows, dry cows, calves and replacements. • Only by worming the whole herd at one time can you effectively break the worm cycle and reduce internal parasitisms on the whole farm • Easy and convenient to feed No handling or restraints to stress animals Just topdress on feed for six days

Let Agway check your herd for worms...

- using a fecal test kit, Agway can tell if worms are present in your herd If worms are present, a Baymix worming program can be started now The recommended Baymix program to reduce parasite levels on the whole farm is a worming in the Spring and again in the Fall

Alfalfa seed available, but supply limited

By KENDACE BORRY

LITITZ — There is alfalfa seed available today, although how long the supply will last some suppliers aren't too sure. That's the report from area seed companies and individuals involved in the forage crop.

William C. Stringer, assistant professor of forage crop management at Penn State, summed it up, "As I check around, there is seed available. But I advise farmers to get their Fall seed supplies early, to plan ahead, because supplies may be tight by then,"

He noted that the price of the alfalfa seed was up, but he thought that was due to inflation, more than any other reason.

Representing P.L. Rohrer and Bros., Inc., Smoketown, Willis Rohrer reported that the supply of alfalfa seed has been short nationwide, although he noted that he believed that his company had been able to secure enough for their trade. He told that they still have limited supplies of varieties resistant to anthracnose and phytophthora (root-rot), the two main diseases found in alfalfa.

He related that last year before the alfalfa seed was harvested in September, a good crop had been expected. But wet weather complicated the harvest, and the yield shrank from good to less than half of normal in spots. And he added, that season had been entered into with very little carry-over of the crop from the year before, allowing little back-up for this year's demands.

So far, all customer demands have been met, and the Spring sales are almost over, he commented.

But come August, when the Fall seeding plans begin, he noted, that's when the supplies will be "hurting".

"Quite a bit of alfalfa is seeded in August," he said. "And there may be little or nothing available by then. My advise to the farmers is to latch onto supplies now. It may not be available then."

Thinking of next year's seed crop, he told that in talking to some of the large producers of alfalfa seed, he learned that their aim is to try and produce more than a normal supply of the seed this year. For the past two years the supply on hand has been used entirely, and they want to have a backlog to back up another year's crop, if necessary.

Most alfalfa seed is harvested in the months of September and October and comes from either the state of California or Idaho.

A spokesman from the Stanford Seed Company, Plymouth Meeting, told too that some alfalfa seed is available, but in limited supplies.

"It looks bad, the seed is scarce, and I don't know yet if everybody is going to clean out for Spring," he commented. "We haven't had a crunch yet, the rainy weather has been holding back the planting and plowing, so there still is some alfalfa around, but it won't last long."

Kenneth Beachley, Shiremanstown, speaking for Beachley-Hardy Seed Co., said that the current stock is "fairly good in the resistant varieties. But," he added, "the supplies will probably be sold out before Fall planting.

He noted , that according to John Baylor, Penn State Extension agronomist, Pennsylvania is expecting a five per cent increase in alfalfa seedings this year. And that means more seed will be used.

And from Mount Joy, Henry Reist representing Reist Seed Co., stated that early in the season there were indications that there were shortages of alfalfa seed supplies. But he thought that there would be enough for Spring plantings.

"We've been told that there will be no new supplies for Fall planting," he remarked. "Things might get tight by Fall. However, right now the newer alfalfa varieties are in more ample supply, and good quality seed still is available.

Fewer feeder cattle

"What we'll see is like numbers to what we're seeing now, or even fewer," he commented. "I think this year we are at the lowest point, (referring to cattle numbers) in the cattle market. We should have more cows on hand as of January 1, 1980, than we did as of January 1, 1979.

Feeder steer prices aren't any higher here in Virginia than anywhere else, he added. The market is high everywhere.

He said that there is an increase in feeder heifers being kept to be turned into beef cows. But, he noted, this hasn't really affected their price. There is still the same spread in steer and heifer prices as usual, the heifer prices aren't being run up.

"I think we are at the top of the price market for feeder steers," he related. "And the prices should hold at this level through mid-summer. Then we should see an adjustment in the price after seeing what the Fall corn prices will be like, and how the fat steer market will decline. But nobody knows what that adjustment will be."

"Prices needed to get higher for cattle," he continued. "It cost more to produce them than farmers were getting. But it reached its present level so quickly that it really put the pressure on. Everyone had doubts about whether it will stay at this level. I think it will stay in this price neighborhood for the next three years, until the cattle numbers start increasing."

At a special feeder calf and yearling sale held in Orange, Va., on April 3, 510 head were sold. Steers, choice and fancy weighing 300 to 500 pounds, brought 95 cents to $1.03 per pound; 500 to 700 pounds brought 82.5 to 85.5 cents; 700 to 800 pounds brought 75 to 78.5 cents per pound; Good, 300 to 500 pounds, brought 97 to $1.08 per pound; 500 to 700 pounds brought 89 to 95 cents per pound; and 700 to 800 pounds brought 70 to 79 cents per pound.

At a special market held April 6, at Winchester, Va., there were 926 head sold. Steers, grading choice and fancy, weighing 300 to 500 pounds brought $1.02 to $1.09½ per pound, 500 to 700 pounds brought 85 to 99 cents per pound, and 700 to 800 pounds brought 76 to 88.5 cents per pound. Good steers, weighing 300 to 500 pounds, brought $1.04½ to $1.07 per pound; 500 to 700 pounds brought 85 to 99 cents per pound; and 700 to 800 pounds brought 82 to 90 cents per pound.

Ironing safety tips given

MEDIA - More than 6000 people were injured last year in ironing accidents. Small children are especially vulnerable because they trip over or pull cords, causing hot irons to fall on them. Greta C. Vairo, Extension Home Economist with the Penn State Extension Service says you can avoid accidents with irons by following these safety guidelines:

Choose an iron with a wide resting base so it can't tip easily.

Always unplug the iron and place it out of children's reach even if you leave for just a few minutes.

Use a sturdy ironing board, placing the board as close as possible to a wall and the outlet in which the iron is plugged.

Unplug a steam iron when you fill it. If water spills on live electrical components, it could cause shock.

Have a leaking iron repaired. The water could cause scalding or a fatal electrical shock.

Coil the cord when you've finished ironing. Then place the iron high up to cool, far out of children's reach.

Lamb prices jump the fence at Easter markets

By JOAN LIESAU

LANCASTER — Lamb prices jumped $10 to $25 per hundred weight at many auctions, from last year, with lighter lambs commanding higher prices across the board at this Easter's lamb market.

Belleville Auction sold 437 lambs and 66 goats at their Easter sale. According to Lyle Cameron, at Belleville Auction, 35-40 pound lambs brought $2.05 per pound with one lamb escalating to $2.30 per pound. On Tuesday, April 3, Vintage Sales Stables sold 154 head. Top prices were seen in choice lambs 30-40 pounds going for $170.00-195.00. Martinsburg Auction, Martinsburg, sold their largest volume of Easter lambs on April 9. Choice lambs from 20-40 pounds commanded $110.00-175.00. The 40-80 pound lambs received $80.00-110.00.

According to Horace Plank, at the Lancaster Stockyards, lamb records were at "near record prices for this Easter market". Plank stated the bulk of the lambs sold at $125.00-$150.00, with a few to $160.00. Plank said the "market stayed steady just about through the whole sale "with some of the lambs selling higher at the end of the sale. About 1850 lambs went through Lancaster Stockyards on April 9, and Planks expects from 500 to 800 April 16 for the Greek Easter Market.

Lambs sold at the Lancaster Markets from North Carolina, Maine, New York and other neighboring states. The reason for this, Plank explained, was because they don't have the markets that we do in the Lancaster area. One Maine lamb consigner complained that the Boston market was too low, and that it paid him to ship his lambs to Lancaster for the Easter sales.

What are the buyers looking for? According to Jim Shearer, livestock disease technician and shepherd from Mountville, they want "mostly 30 to 40 pound lambs for roasting. The buyers don't want them too fat ... a good thick meaty lamb."

Shearer felt the lighter lambs would stay steady through the Greek Easter, with the heavier lambs staying about the same as last week's sales. He said the price will taper from what it was at the holidays because "people eat lambs at Easter, and then will switch to another meat for awhile. Prices will drop for a few months and then people will start buying lamb again."

Horace Plank expects the lamb market to stay up "pretty well", not expecting to see any "cheap lambs sold in the near future." Bob Groff, a livestock buyer from Leola felt the price drop would make it adventageous for the producer to hold their lambs and put more weight on them for the Fall markets.

Lots of action was seen at the area auctions this week as thousands of lambs were sold to the top bidder. This scene was taken on April 10, at Vintage Sales Stables, Paradise.

Grain company chief predicts high corn demand

CHICAGO — A grain company executive has warned that nearby corn surplusses from the record 1978 crop could cloud the fact that 1979/80 demand could exceed production.

Bernard Steinweg, executive vice president of the North American Grain Division of Continental Grain Company, told the Eighth International Commodities Conference here that the record 1978 7.1 billion bushel corn crop has obscured a record utilization figure of about 6.6 billion bushels.

According to Steinweg, a corn corp of 6.5 to 6.6 billion bushels in 1979 would be "below potential utilization."

"We are presently forecasting a 1979/80 demand of about 6.9 billion bushels," he said. "Any reduction in supply could affect market availabilities and necessitate the release of corn held in the grain reserve."

Supporting his view of a strong demand for next year, Steinweg reviewed current corn usage requirements.

"Domestic usage will be up for two reasons," he predicted. "Industrial usage continues to gain primarily because of growth in the wet milling sector. Feed consumption, the most important component, should be up more than 10 per cent from a year ago."

The livestock consumption base – grain consuming animal units – is up about six per cent, according to Steinweg. "Amount fed per animal has increased primarily because of highly favorable livestock-feed price relationships. We will also feed less wheat."

Regarding the export market, Steinweg noted that there are both "negative and positive factors."

He explained that France and Thailand will have larger exports of corn than a year earlier. On the other hand, South Africa and Brazil have experienced serious drought, and in fact Brazil, normally an exporter of corn, could be an importer for the second straight year.

The Soviet market will take less than the 11 million tons of U.S. corn a year ago, with exports more on the order of 7 million tons, the grain official went on.

"We also expect U.S. corn exports to the European Common Market to be down due to the larger French corn crop and to greater overall Common Market production of all grains . . . wheat and barley, as well as corn."

Steinweg pointed to the Chinese market as one of the most positive elements in the entire export picture. "We expect U.S. corn exports to that destination to be between 3 and 4 million tons."

Exports likewise will increase to Eastern Europe, Spain, Taiwan, South Korea and the Western Hemisphere, especially Mexico, due in part to reduced domestic production in some areas or reduced availabilities from traditional suppliers. The most striking factor, Steinweg believes, is simply an overall growth in use of feed grains.

Steinweg said that world surplus coarse grain stocks are located chiefly in North America. "The surplus situation here is not indicative of most of the remainder of the world."

"Crop difficulties elsewhere, as well as here, would reverse decisively world stock building in coarse grains."

Hallowell reminds red cherry producers to vote in referendum

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell is reminding producers of red cherries for processing to vote in the referendum on the Cherry Marketing Board before 4 p.m., April 18. A two-thirds vote of participating growers is necessary to continue the Red Cherry Marketing Program for five more years.

The Red Cherry Marketing Program was initiated in 1974. Under the program, growers agree to assess themselves $2 per ton on cherries sold for processing. The funds are used for promotions, marketing research and advertising.

Hallowell noted that Pennsylvania ranks fifth in the nation in the production of red cherries. He said that during the past five years, the Pennsylvania Red Cherry Growers Association has recieved $6980 from the Red Cherry Advisory Board for in-state promotions.

Through these funds the activities of the State Red Cherry Queen have been greatly expanded. Additionally, the funds were used to print red cherry recipes for distribution to consumers. The reigning Pennsylvania Red Cherry Queen is Naomi Peters of Biglerville, Adams County.

The Red Cherry Advisory Board has also authorized a grant of $23,900 to the National Red Cherry Institute for national promotion through point of sale merchandising aids.

The Board has also obtained the cooperation of commercial and institutional food outlets in efforts to expand the use of red cherries.

Energy savings highlighted at Dairy Day

UNIVERSITY PARK — Heating water in the milking process and cooling milk to the desired holding temperature prior to pick-up requires a considerable amount of energy and results in additional costs for dairymen, says Stephen B. Spencer, Extension dairy specialist at The Pennsylvania State University.

Spencer, a speaker at the recent Dairy Day held on the University Park Campus, pointed out that approximately one kilowatt of electricity is needed to cool 100 pounds of milk in a regular cooler.

At the same time, he noted, it is not uncommon for the diaryman to use 250 gallons of hot water daily. Assuming this water is heated to 110 degrees Fahrenheit, this means that 22,825 BTU's are needed daily for water heating. An electrical heating unit would use 66.8 kilowatts per day or about 2000 kilowatts per month.

"It's more economically feasible to use heat exchangers on the compressor units of bulk tanks to heat the water," the Extension specialist emphasized. "Heat exchangers, on the market, consist of lines connected to the hot water storage tank, compressor, and refrigerant."

Heat reclaimers for water, another system used by dairymen, can produce 140 degrees F water in quantities equal to the amount of milk produced, Spencer told the 250 persons attending the Dairy Day.

They can be economically sound investments under most circumstances. Where large volumes of water are used, payback on the equipment may be expected in 1 to 2 years.

Dr. Larry D. Muller, associate professor of dairy science, reported on several nutrition research studies being conducted at Penn State designed to reduce animal feeding costs.

One study involves substituting ground high quality forage for grain concentrate in the milking cow's ration. When 33 per cent of the grain mixture was replaced with high quality ground hay, milk production remained approximately the same, he reported. Additional research, however, is needed before this practice can be recommended to dairymen.

Muller pointed out that sodium bicarbonate (baking soda) was added at the rate of 1.5 per cent of the grain ration to decrease acidic conditions in the cow's rumen to increase feed intake. Results indicated that there was a slight increase in feed intake, a slight increase in milk production, and the cows gained weight.

He added that wood fines, a paper by-product, have been successfully used to replace forage in the ration of milking cows. Studies have shown that fines can be a viable substitute for forage.

William F. Johnstone, Extension agricultural economist, also a Dairy Day speaker, pointed out that milk consumers are drinking about 21 per cent less whole milk than they did in 1970. However, there has been a dramatic increase in the consumption of low-fat skim milk. Cheese also has gained in popularity, a 41 per cent increase in sales since 1970.

"Changes in the lifestyles and preferences of consumers have resulted in the shift from home delivery to store sales," Johnstone said. "Today, only about 10 per cent of milk sold to consumers is delivered to the home."

Donald L. Ace, interim head of the Penn State Dairy and Animal Science Department, noted that employment opportunities for new dairy science graduates are tremendous.

"We are seeing many graduates returning to the home farm or purchasing a farm of their own," he said. "This was not the trend 20 years ago. Then the majority of graduates were looking for off-farm employment."

Dr. James M. Beattie, dean of the College of Agriculture, discussed the changes taking place in the department, including a new dairy science major. He stressed the need for additional research to provide high quality, low-cost food for the nation's consumer.

Dr. John O. Almquist, professor of dairy physiology, outlined ways to correct errors in field handling bull semen in straws.

If they eat up your time along with your feed, maybe it's time for Chore-Time.

The old "cart and scoop" approach to confinement feeding just doesn't make it anymore. It's too much work. It takes too much time. It wastes too much feed.

Chore-Time's Flex Auger® system makes feed-handling a push-button proposition. Feed is automatically conveyed from bulk bin to hog feeders through a closed tube—so there's no chance of spillage or contamination.

Drug withdrawal is simplified with Chore-Time's tandem boot feature. A single flex fill system feeds from either bin.

We specialize in feeding systems and air systems. Which helps explain why Chore-Time makes the longest-lasting, most trouble-free systems on the market.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

I strongly disagree with your editorial comments of April 7th concerning the press' handling of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear fission plant. I think the press did a good job of informing people of the state of the situation despite attempts by power company officials to cover up their mistakes and violations. This accident caused severe mental anguish, great ecnomic losses due to decreased property values and loss of business and exposure to radiation that for some will mean cancer and birth defects in the years ahead. Our free press was our best ally in this time of confusion and fear.

The economic losses being felt by Pennsylvania farmers are the fault of the Metropolitan Edison Co., not newspaper overreaction. People have a right to know the quality of their food, and low amounts of radioactive iodine have been detected. Instead of condemning news coverage you should have called on your readers to write their government officials and demand a moratorium on construction and operation of all nuclear power plants. A Pennsylvania without nuclear power would be a better place to live and work. Nuclear power is not a safe energy source. The cooling systems for nuclear plants are not perfected, continued exposure to low level radiation is carcinogenic and the problems of disposing nuclear waste are still not solved. We must rely on coal, energy conservation, and new solar technology to meet our energy needs.

Sincerely,
Robert A. Boyer
Chester Springs

Editor: I want to say amen to your editorial comment on "Reactor is cool ... now the people." I agree with all you said and think the news reporters make everything they report 10 times worse. They never report the good of anything. I enjoy your paper very much and like your telling it like it is.

Sincerely,
Marvin Brown
Littlestown

Editor: I enjoy and read your paper every week and think you put together a fine paper. But your April Fool jokes last year and this year are sick jokes.

Yours truly,

Soil erosion project wins award

LITITZ — Steve Shelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Shelly, Lititz, was recipient of the PDC-ASLA Science Fair Award at the Lancaster Science and Engineering Fair held at Lampeter-Strasburg last Thursday.

Steve won for his Soil Erosion Project, in which he tested various ground covers for prevention of erosion. He tested sod, tree bark, forest litter and pebbles, and determined sod to be the best ground cover.

The award was presented by Wilmer Burkhart, representing the South Central Section, Pennsylvania-Delaware Chapter, American Society of Landscape Architects (PDC-ASLA). The award is offered to students in the hope of stimulating their awareness and concern for the use of the environment and limited natural resources. It is also to alert them to the fact that there are professional landscape architects who address themselves to and offer their expertise and services to problems related to land planning, storm water management, energy conservation, etc., so that when these students will have the knowledge of where to seek help for the environmental problems they encounter.

— In addition to the certificate of merit, Steve received $25 cash.

Steve Shelly, on the right, is presented with the award he won from the PDC-ASLA. Presenting the award is Wilmer Burkhart, representing the group.

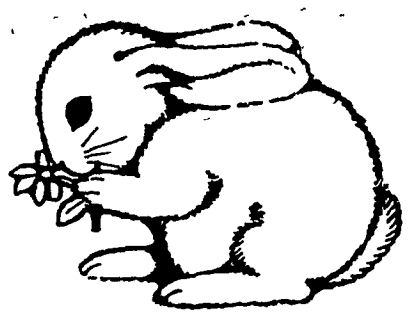
LIFE on the farm



By Dieter Krieg, Editor

Farmers have it made, whether they realize it or not. They're living on the right side of the fence - despite occasional feelings (which I've experienced myself) that the grass is greener on the other side.

Sure, there are problems on the farm. It's certainly not all peaches and cream, as they say. But I believe in the Easter Bunny, you see, and that makes all the difference.

While you and I are "turned on" by the green grass and freshly plowed soil, others less fortunate get their thrills from bottles and bars.

While you and I may have experienced a plow trip over a rock, others less fortunate have tripped over a pill.

While sunshine and flowers make you and me feel joyous all over, some city folks have never known that warmth and beauty.

Yes sir, I'm in full agreement with John Denver when he sings jubilantly: "Thank God I'm a County Boy." Life on the farm is beautiful in more ways than one.

On a recent sunny afternoon, as I drove through the country, I marveled at white barns and the silos with their sparkling tops. Green fields were beginning to appear and ponds glistened in the sunlight.

Our beautiful farmland, what a precious sight! It's a pity that some folks aren't aware of the pure beauty that radiates from our land.

I believe that we're all born with a curiosity and wonder for what abounds in Nature. Unfortunately, those feelings escape us to some degree as we grow older. We get away from the simple and innocent and pure. The majestic beauties of Nature aren't as easily seen.

We don't have time for Easter Bunnies anymore because we know they're not real creatures.

But what they represent is real - isn't it?

Warmth, beauty, faith, hope, triumph, love and even life itself - aren't these what Spring, and Easter are all about?

I'm glad my children find it necessary to stop and observe life in the cracks of the sidewalk, even though it may not suit my schedule to be so delayed. And I'm glad they drag the pine cones into the house, even though it makes a mess. And those sticks they "plant" in the yard, in hopes that they'll grow into trees, I'm thankful for their innocent faith. They bring their mother a dandelion as a present and they care about birds, insects, flowers, and even weeds. They get turned on by that sort of stuff. I wish more kids would be.

My prayer for this Easter is:

May God be praised for providing the bright and beautiful gifts, and may he continue to have us see them. And may others become more aware of those treasures too.

Happy Easter, everyone!

Leola agreed to take the remaining four at $60 a head.

Second place in lightweights, shown by Little Piggy Hill Farm, had a top bid of $71 from a representative of the Cecil County Livestock Club, who chose to pay that for one of the group. Meadowood Farms of Elverson R2 paid $65 each for the next six head and the last one in the group went to Clyde Hunt of Millersville for $57.

W.E. Kreider chose to take three at $55 a head when the third place lightweight pen was brought into the auction ring. It was exhibited by David Glass of Birdsboro R1. The remaining five were sold to Henry Zook at $51 each.

The third place mediumweight pen, exhibited by Eli Zeiset of Morgantown R1, was auctioned off to David Smith of Denver and Steve McMichael of Willow Street R1. Smith paid $57 for his choice of one, while McMichael chose the remaining seven at $55 per head.

Ed Ranck, owner of the third place heavyweight entries, weighing an average of 56 pounds each, sold his pigs to Jay Zimmerman of New Holland R1, the Cecil County Livestock Club, and Clyde Hunt. Their respective bids were $69 for one, $64 for one, and $61 for the other six.

Other placings of the show were as follows: Lightweights – 4. Elam Beiler, 5. Isaac Beiler; Mediumweights – 4. Larry Weaver, 5. Dutch Valley Farms; Heavyweights – 4. Dale Nolt, 5. Valleys End Farm.

A total of 284 head were sold for a total of $16,564.

Lamb prices jump the fence at markets

Shearer said the next large market will be this Fall. "They won't flood the market" he said, "but it will be overloaded for a short period of time." Shearer explained that many producers will have their ewes lamb when the grass is up in the Spring. These lambs will be ready for the Fall markets in October and November. "Even if the price does drop down 10 cents" he said "the producer is still making more clear money because he is not putting the grain into his lambs like he would if he was marketing them in the Spring."

Dr. Robert Herr of Narvon, said "a lot of people overlook the Christmas market. If people can drop lambs in the Fall and sell them at the Christmas market, they will do just as well." Herr said at this past year's Christmas sales, 80-100 pound rams were selling at about $80 per hundred weight. He added that not too many sheep are available at that time.

Kid goats were also intermingled with the lambs. Elmer Beiler, a goat breeder from Lancaster said that so far he has "found the Easter market to be best" for his kids. Beiler said he averaged "about a dollar per pound this year".

The milk fed kids also received higher prices then the grain fed. "You can easily tell a milk fed from a grain fed goat" Beiler said. He explained the milk fed kids were naturally more healthy, stronger and faster growing.

A special goat and lamb sale was held in Courtland, Va., on April 3. Kids sold at $24-$34 for large; $19-30 for medium; and $14-17 for small kids. Heavy lambs, 95-113 pounds went from $61.00-67.50.

Beiler explained most goat breeders try to have their stock bred in the early Fall so they will have their kids near the Easter market. He felt the Easter and Greek Easter markets were about equal for selling his kids, but said the price will "drop to about half" after the holidays. Lyle Cameron, at the Belleville Auction felt that goats were "cheaper this year because they were smaller in size than last year."

Eye protection necessary when handling ammonia fertilizer

NEW YORK, N.Y. — In soil, anhydrous ammonia can mean abundant crops, but, in an eye, this potent fertilizer can cause painful injury and even total blindness.

To avoid vision-threatening injuries, the National Society to Prevent Blindness urges the use of protective eyewear when handling and applying anhydrous. "Appropriate chemical type safety goggles, with hooded vents and a rim fitting closely around the eye area, are a must for everyone at all times when working with or near anhydrous ammonia," advised Virginia S. Boyce, NSPB's executive director.

The Society cited accident data to emphasize that eye protection must be both available and used to effectively prevent injury. "Reports show that only 60 percent of victims of anhydrous ammonia accidents had safety eyewear available to them," Mrs. Boyce said. "And, even where such protection was available, it was largely unused," she added.

Anhydrous ammonia is one of the most damaging substances affecting the eye. Within seconds of contact, it begins destroying cells and tissues. "Should this dangerous chemical get into the eyes, the emergency first aid treatment involves immediately flushing them with fresh water for at least 15 minutes," Mrs. Boyce advised. Salves or ointments should never be put in the eyes; they tend to complicate first aid and later medical treatment.

"As emergency first aid, if a body of water is nearby, the person affected should immerse himself completely in it – holding his eyelids open so that the ammonia can be diluted and washed away. After thoroughly flushing the eyes with water, medical attention from a physician is the next step to be taken. The longer the treatment is delayed, the greater the chances are for sight loss," Mrs. Boyce cautioned.

No one, no matter how careful, is immune to injury when working with anhydrous ammonia. The following measures are necessary:

Carry a plastic squeeze bottle of water in a shirt pocket to flush the eyes immediately, should contact with anhydrous occur.

Have a 5-gallon tank of fresh water attached to the applicator and nurse tank.

Each day, carefully check all hose fittings and connections on equipment.

Thoroughly understand how to operate any equipment prior to use.

Many eye injuries occur during the transfer of pressurized anhydrous ammonia from the bulk supply to smaller tanks, a process which may be repeated several times between production plant and farm users. All it takes is a minor equipment defect -- a weak point in a hose, a faulty valve, a worn fitting – and eyesight may be threatened. Carelessness or human error multiply the dangers to vision.

MILK
SO GOOD SO NUTRITIOUS

but Agway research has shown that their nutrient requirements may vary significantly

Agway can now offer feeding programs tailored to many commercial layer strains.
It has been well established that meat birds have different nutrient requirements than layers. Now, Agway research has gone a step farther It has demonstrated that different strains of the same breed of commercial layers have different nutrient requirements The trials show that production can be improved with a feeding program that's tailored to the needs of a particular strain

When three commercial strains of the same breed were tested on two Agway feeding programs, here's what happened

PERCENT HEN-DAY PRODUCTION DURING A 392-DAY LAYING TRIAL

Agway Feeding Program	Same Breed, Commercial Strain
	A	B	C
I	67 3	65 5	72 3
II	71 5	70 7	70 0

A little pencil work makes it apparent that the difference in total production in one of today's large commercial houses can add up to thousands of dozens of eggs during the laying period of a given strain

Agway research is continuing to develop feeding programs that provide, without excesses, the nutrients your favorite strain needs for optimum production Such research will help you, as a commercial producer, bring more eggs to market at a cost that will provide you a greater return

If you would like to know more about the possibilities of increased production through a tailored Agway feeding program, contact your Agway Poultry Enterprise Serviceperson As a first step, call your local Agway store

Pork cut meat chart available

CHICAGO, Ill. – Twenty of the most profitable foodservice cuts of pork can be identified at a glance with a new full-color wall chart available from the Pork Industry Group of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The 24 inch by 36 inch chart features a color photograph of each cut, along with its proper name and Institutional Meat Purchase Specification/National Assn. of Meat Purveyors number. The photos are also color-coded to illustrate where each cut comes from on the pork carcass.

The chart is an ideal guide for the foodservice operator or meat buyer. Placed on an office wall or other strategic location, it can minimize purchasing error and make cut selection easier.

In addition, the chart illustrates the wide variety of fresh and processed pork cuts available to the foodservice operator for recipe development.

Foodservice educators and those involved in training programs will also find the chart useful in making students aware of the various pork cuts and where they come from.

The chart is made of durable, varnished paper. It can be imprinted with a company name and logo (for a small charge), which makes it an ideal item for meat packers and purveyors to leave with customers as a guide for future ordering.

Prices for the wall chart are: 1-9, $1.50 each; 10-99, $1.25 each; 100 and up, $1.00 each. Imprint costs available on request.

An 8 1/2" x 11" version of the chart will be available in mid-May, 1979. Prices are: 1-9, 25 cents each; 10-99, 15 cents each; 100 and up, $7.50 per 100; 1,000 and up, $45.00 per 1,000. This version may also be imprinted; costs available on request.

To order, write: Pork Industry Group, National Live Stock and Meat Board, 444 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

Proper manure handling can keep neighbor's noses satisfied

NEWARK, Del. — Unpleasant odors associated with livestock operations can be reduced with chemical treatment, says University of Delaware associate professor of agricultural engineering Dr. William F. Ritter. But it's more effective to prevent those odors from being produced.

Most odors in livestock operations are the result of anaerobic (without oxygen) breakdown of manure. This requires moisture and warm temperatures. Preventing odors means establishing conditions unfavorable to bacterial growth.

Many odor complaints are related to manure storage. Toxic gasses and odors are released during agitation of liquid manure storage tanks. It's best to locate tanks outdoors and to keep them covered. If tanks must be located indoors, all windows and doors should be opened and ventilation fans should be operated when agitation and pumping take place.

Solid manure storage systems generally produce less odor than liquid storage systems. Any solid manure storage system should be covered and should exclude all extraneous liquid such as surface runoff. Leach from manure storage should be drained into a collection basin or pond.

Anaerobic lagoons are often used for animal waste systems because they break down most solids while storing wastes. Most odors associated with anaerobic lagoons are caused by overloading, according to Ritter.

During Spring, as lagoon temperatures rise and bacterial action increases, significant odors are produced. However, several management practices can minimize the problem.

Always provide enough water to dilute the odor-producing compounds. Add wastes frequently, rather than in large, irregular quantities. Only pump lagoon effluent when winds are blowing away from the neighbors.

Odors aren't usually a problem in aerobic (requiring oxygen) treatment systems, except when malfunctions occur or when extra-high oxygen demand in Spring temporarily causes them to go anaerobic. Despite this advantage, however, aerobic systems are often impractical. Naturally aerated lagoons require very large land areas, while mechanically aerated lagoons are expensive to operate because of high energy requirements.

Feedlot odors can't be entirely eliminated but can be minimized by proper construction and management procedures. The lot site should be located ¼ to ½ mile from neighboring residences and a mile from any housing developments. Prevailing winds should blow away from the nearest neighbors. The site should have good drainage and proper orientation for maximum drying rates. Slopes of four to six per cent are generally preferred for unsurfaced lots. Concrete surfaced lots may have lesser slopes and still be satisfactory.

Concrete surfaces should be used around feed bunkers and watering troughs, since these drain and dry more readily than unsurfaced areas. Mounds can be used to give animals a dry place to lie down if drainage is marginal.

Regular manure removal and adequate drainage keep animals clean and also help reduce odors. Runoff control facilities such as solids settling basins and runoff holding ponds should be cleaned and emptied as soon as possible after a storm.

Spread manure only when conditions are right for minimizing odor problems. Wait for a day with low relative humidity, high wind velocity, clear, sunny skies, and soil that's dry enough to plow or disk. Best time of day is between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. This allows two hours for the manure to dry before the period most favorable for odor transport.

Avoid spreading manure when the wind is blowing toward populated areas or heavily travelled roads. Don't spread manure immediately before weekends or holidays, when people are likely to be engaged in nearby outdoor recreational activities.

If possible, manure should be incorporated into the soil during or immediately after application. This practice not only minimizes odors, but also preserves nutrients and reduces water pollution potential. Finally, manure should be spread uniformly in a layer thin enough to insure drying in five days or less.

Canadian firm to buy Badger Co.

DES MOINES, Iowa — Massey-Ferguson Inc. of Des Moines, Iowa, and Pedlar Industrial Inc. of Toronto have announced an agreement in principle for Pedlar to purchase Massey-Ferguson's wholly-owned subsidiary, Badger Northland Inc. of Kaukauna, Wis. The transaction is expected to be completed by June 29.

Badger Northland produces forage and feeding equipment, solid farm liquid manure handling systems, manure spreaders and mower conditioners for hay. The company, which was acquired by Massey-Ferguson in 1965, employs 400 people. Its sales in 1978 were U.S. $27 million dollars.

Pedlar Industrial, which last month changed its name from Fittings Ltd., is a Canadian company which manufactures agricultural equipment, industrial storage products and malleable and gray iron castings. The company's sales in 1978 were estimated at approximate Canadian dollars $28 million.

Massey-Ferguson Inc. is the U.S. operating company of Massey-Ferguson Limited of Toronto, a multinational company that manufactures farm and industrial machinery, diesel engines and construction machinery.

Darwin G. Kettering, president of Massey-Ferguson Inc., said: "The sale is part of the company's overall program to rationalize our manufacturing facilities and product lines and to concentrate on those facilities and products that make up our core business. It will free up some valuable assets that we can apply to that core business."

Graeme G. Kirkland, president of Pedlar Industrial, said: "The proposed acquisition of Badger Northland represents a logical extension of Pedlar Industrial, activities in the agricultural equipment industry and reflects our continuing commitment to needs of the dairy and livestock farmers of North America."

being brought to laboratories for analyzation has already been reduced. Just five samples were received by DER yesterday.

Meanwhile, a radiological laboratory has opened in Middletown to determine how much radiation might have been absorbed by area residents. Among the first to have taken the test were dairy farmers Christian Becker of Bainbridge and Richard Alwine of Middletown. Neither of the two men, nor their wives, ever left their farms while the drama was unfolding. Becker reportedly kept right on using his cows' milk in his own home.

No abnormal radiation levels were found in either Alwine, Becker, their wives, or anyone else residing in the area who is not directly associated with the TMI plant. Also, no traces of radioactive contamination have been found in any vegetables or soil samples.

"The problem was not what we feared it would be. Milk has been selling better than we feared.

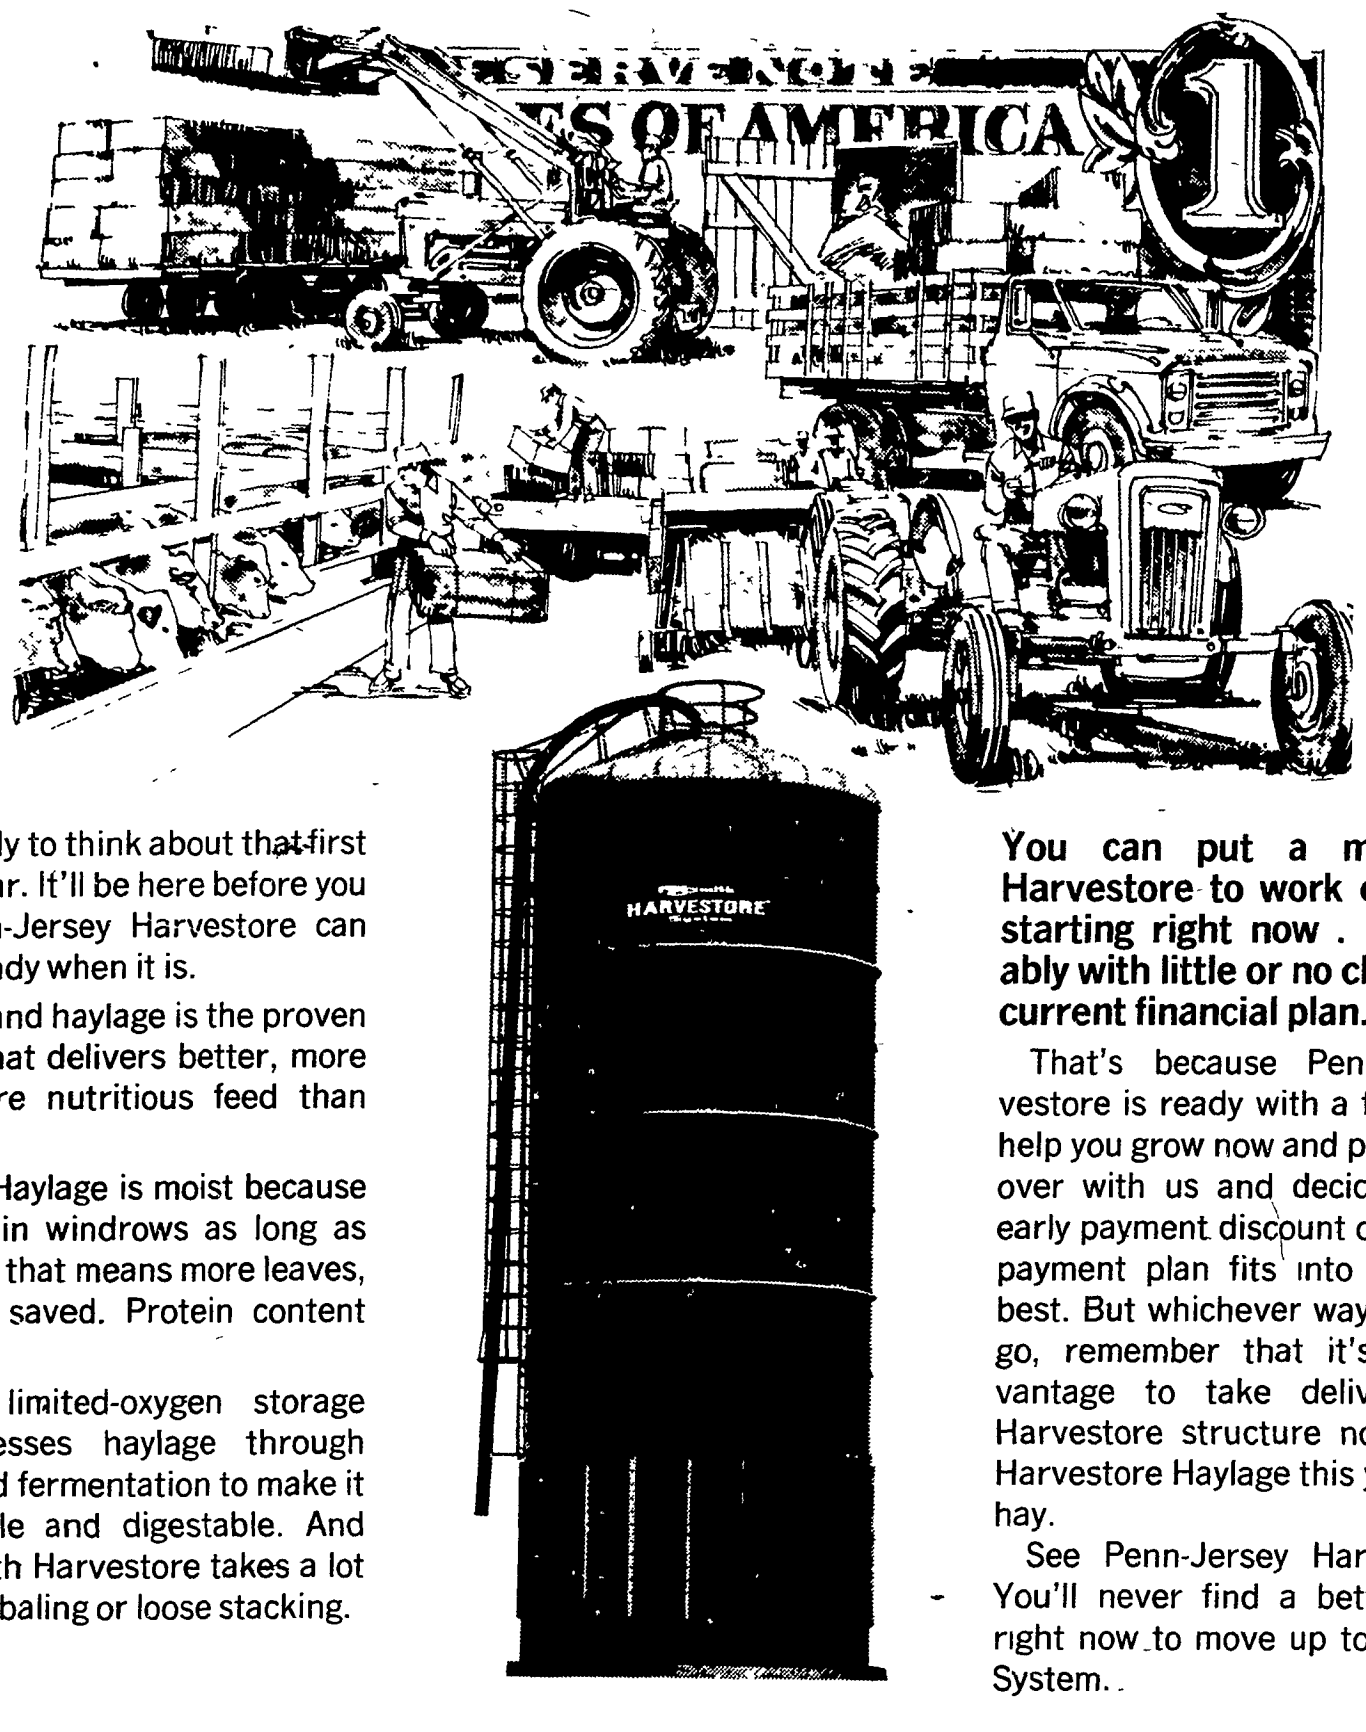
Make haylage with Harvestore®... right now!



It's not too early to think about that first cutting this year. It'll be here before you know it. Penn-Jersey Harvestore can help you be ready when it is.

Harvestore and haylage is the proven combination that delivers better, more palatable, more nutritious feed than hay alone.

Harvestore Haylage is moist because it doesn't lay in windrows as long as baled hay. And that means more leaves, and vitamins, saved. Protein content stays high, too.

Harvestore limited-oxygen storage actually processes haylage through mild, controlled fermentation to make it highly palatable and digestable. And making hay with Harvestore takes a lot less work than baling or loose stacking.

You can put a money-making Harvestore to work on your farm starting right now . . . and probably with little or no change in your current financial plan.

That's because Penn-Jersey Harvestore is ready with a flexible plan to help you grow now and pay later. Talk it over with us and decide whether an early payment discount or our deferred payment plan fits into your program best. But whichever way you decide to go, remember that it's to your advantage to take delivery on your Harvestore structure now, and make Harvestore Haylage this year instead of hay.

See Penn-Jersey Harvestore soon. You'll never find a better time than right now to move up to a Harvestore System.

HARVESTORE FARMERS are less at the mercy of the weather because Haylage does not have to be field wilted to the extent required for baling.

HAYLAGE COULD BE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SAVING THE CROP - OR LOSING IT ALL - TRYING TO BALE HAY.

Available Immediately - Used 16x60 Stave Silo, 3 year old unloader, new filler pipe, Lazy Susan feeder. Call 354-4051 for details.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hershey, left, of Marietta, and Mr. and Mrs. James Landis of East Petersburg are among the farm families in southcentral Pennsylvania who feel threatened by nuclear power plants. Their concern grew after the mishap at the atomic generating facility on Three Mile Island last month. With the farm couples are their respective daughters, Jessica, left, and Abigail.

Atomic mishap turned some farmers off

By DIETER KRIEG

MARIETTA — After having sensed danger two weeks ago when a nuclear reactor about ten miles from his home went out of control, James Hershey believes "the consequences of such accidents are so dire that I don't think we can afford to live with them."

"We've never felt very good about nuclear power as an alternate source of energy. In a way I'm glad this happened because it's going to make people deal a little more realistically with the dangers of it. I don't think these things can ever be made safe enough. I think it's impossible for them to ever rule out the possibilities of an accident," Hershey explained.

Hershey and his wife, the former Nancy Frey, were most concerned about their 2-year old daughter, Jessica. She is their first child. Although they did not leave the farm and their home, they did make an effort to keep their daughter inside, the couple said. They farm a total of 400 acres, of which 140 acres are owned.

While admitting that they weren't actively opposed to nuclear energy when the Metropolitan Edison Company began generating electricity from the atomic facility a few years ago, the Hersheys now believe that it should not be the wave of the future.

"I'm not convinced that the oil situation is as serious as it's cracked up to be. But that's not to say that I don't feel strongly about our need to conserve oil. We'll have to be willing to sacrifice. Coal has its problems too, but I think it will give us a break," Hershey continued.

Although Hershey and his wife were and still are concerned about their livelihood and the future of their farm, Hershey claimed that he did not feel "that personally threatened" by the accident.

"Basically, I'm concerned about our country's view on nuclear energy. I think we need to become more aware that this is not going to be worth it. I believe many farmers have neither the education nor the background on radiation to realize the dangers," the Lancaster County farmer continued. Both he and his wife attended college for a couple of years.

Despite the fact that a crisis situation has been averted, Hershey isn't so sure that the worst is over. "Whatever it is they're going to do to clean up, I'm not sure they're gong to do it safely," he said.

The Hersheys are not alone with their concerns. Another young farm couple, James and Alta Landis of East Petersburg, are also worried. They're friends of the Hersheys and are in partnership with them in a potato business.

When a robot was brought onto the scene, Mrs. Landis said that proved to her that humans had overstepped their bounds.

They wonder now whether or not any radiation leaks might have contaminated their soil.

Across the Susquehanna River, near Goldsboro, York County, 73-year old Charles Conley is convinced that problems have increased on his farm ever since the nuclear power plant went into operation in 1974. Conley's 119 acre farm sits on a hill overlooking Three Mile Island, site of the disabled nuclear power plant. His fields come to within a mile of the facility.

There are two atomic fission units on Three Mile Island. According to Conley, the first one wasn't "so bad." When Unit 2 went into operation last Fall, however he noticed a difference. "It makes a heck of a racket," he noted. He heard the screaming blast of steam early in the morning of March 28 when the drama on Three Mile Island began. "It wasn't the first time I heard lots of noise from the plant. I heard it long before last week, and I've seen steam going up in the air too," Conley explained.

While radiation can't be detected by any of a person's senses, Conley sees an element of danger in the clouds of steam that spew out of the cooling towers of a nuclear plant He associates those same vapors with some of the

Easter Joy

"Why are you troubled, and why do questionings rise in your hearts? See my hands and feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see, for a spirit has not flesh and bones as you see that I have." Luke 24:38–39 "Because I live, you shall live also." John 14:19

"For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord." Romans 6:23 "That IF thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Romans 10:9

May the joy of the first Easter morning, and the peace of God abide in your heart this Easter season.

Fertilizer material availability affected by railcar shortage

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Areas of the country reporting shortages of fertilizer materials are actually bearing the brunt of a "catastrophic" rail car situation, according to a fertilizer industry spokesman.

Edwin M. Wheeler, president of The Fertilizer Institute, in responding to what has been termed "spot shortages" of fertilizer materials in several parts of the country, said that a huge back order of rail cars - and not fertilizer availability - is the cause.

"Current inventories are adequate to meet the needs of U.S. farmers," he said.

"The problem is in moving that inventory from supplier to retailer."

The Institute's most recent "Car Situation Report" shows that, for the 22 producer companies participating in the survey, more than 2,400 carloads of fertilizer have not been shipped due to car shortages.

"Today, the back order in the U.S. for all new rail cars stands at more than 104,000." Wheeler added.

"To put that in better perspective, if you were to order a new box or hopper car today - to move fertilizer - that car would not be delivered until mid-1982. So, it's not a problem that can be immediately solved merely by ordering more cars."

The 104,000 car backorders compare with back orders of 84,000 cars during this same period one year ago.

The association president said that these reports have been sent to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and Interstate Commerce Commission Chairman Dan O'Neal, in search of action to relieve the situation.

Wheeler said that poor railroad service makes the car shortage problem a yearly "headache" for producers, retailers and farmers and is particularly acute during the peak Spring planting season.

Twp. supervisors to meet

HERSHEY – Nearly 1400 delegates of the Pennsylvania State Association of Township Supervisors will meet at the Hershey Motor Lodge and Convention Center for their 57th annual convention April 22 to 25. The purpose of the convention is to provide township officials with necessary tools to make them more knowledgeable and better equipped to serve their citizens.

This year's key speakers are Pennsylvania Governor Richard Thornburgh, U.S. Senator H. John Heinz, and Jack Watson, President Jimmy Carter's Special Assistant on Intergovernmental Affairs.

The delegates represent Pennsylvania's 1458 townships of the second class.

problems he has experienced in recent years on his farm. He notes that the clouds pass directly over his farm during rainy weather, when the wind comes from the east.

"The first rain is always white like milk," he said. "That white stuff on the water was never there before the plant was built," he continued. Consequently, he routinely sweeps out his watering troughs. Conley has several head of cattle and a few hogs.

"I've not only seen some of the effects the plant has had on my farm, it has cost me a lot of money too," the elderly farmer went on. Some of his livestock is weak. Breeding difficulties are predominant. Veterinary bills and feed costs have increased accordingly, he said. On the advise of his veterinarian, he has kept his feeds covered since long before the nuclear accident of March 28.

Conley himself never left the farm during the entire ordeal, but he did stay inside the house for much of the time. "I wasn't going to leave until they said I had to go," he commented.

Trend to bigger farms won't be reversed

By JERRY WEBB
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — What we think of as traditional family farming in this country is in a slow decline and the overall trend is unmistakably clear. That's the opinion of a University of Missouri agricultural economist who says it's only a matter of time. Speaking at a farm policy seminar last winter, Harold Breimyer pointed out that family farms are being literally gobbled up, not by the corporate giants but by what he calls "larger-than-family farms".

Most definitions of the family farm revolve around an enterprise that is managed by the farm family head and staffed by that manager and his immediate kin. Usually that means wife and children.

Over the years the family farmer has struggled to make ends meet and usually it has meant yielding his offspring to some other means of earning a living. Many of the people who work in agricultural industry are displaced farm boys and girls who had to leave the family farm when they reached working age because it would support no more than the immediate family.

But in recent years some of that has been changing. Some farmers, buoyed by strong price prospects, have expanded to what Breimyer calls the "larger-than-family farms". Basically these are still family units but they require more labor than the typical farm family can provide so some hired workers are involved. Such farm units may be incorporated for business and other reasons but they're not owned by absentee conglomerates and they're not staffed and managed by unknowing, uncaring, mindless corporate workers.

These units are becoming more important in terms of this nation's food production and the Missouri economist believes no amount of government meddling, or crying-towel antics, are going to reverse the trend. He cites figures that show the largest one-tenth of U.S. farms now produce about two-thirds of total farm marketings. And the very largest two percent are responsible for more than a third of all production. That means that those expanding family farm units that utilize some hired labor and gross perhaps $100,000 or more a year are becoming more of a factor on the rural landscape.

Breimyer doesn't believe the family farm is in a period of crisis. But he points out it's only a matter of time until the small operators, who are counting on the farm for their total livelihood, are in trouble.

The economist makes an interesting point about the impending crisis of family farms. He believes the family farm system is most threatened in times of agricultural prosperity. He thinks that's when alternative systems to family farming get involved. For instance, gains in farmland prices over the past few years have attracted many nonfarm investors who see huge profit potential in farmland. This has put tremendous pressure on family farm units from a couple of points of view. Those who want to expand, find land prices prohibitively expensive and those that are barely hanging on find the sellout price most attractive.

The Missouri economist believes off-farm jobs are another strong threat to the family farm system. They provide alternatives to the financially hard-pressed farm family. They syphon off energy and enthusiasm and they create new pressures and new dreams, all of which may contribute to the demise of a family farm unit.

Breimyer presents a very gloomy view of the future for family farms. He feels they're now being replaced by the larger-than-family farms. These he describes as a prelude to corporate farming. He feels our whole economy seems to be headed toward the corporate conglomerate way of getting things done and that agriculture will follow suit in time unless some specific, protective action is taken.

Farmers have steadfastly maintained that corporations can't farm with the same skill, care and productivity of the farm family. So far that attitude has been pretty much right. The corporate giants haven't made much impact in agriculture, but that's not to say it will always be that way. As farming becomes more automated, more precise and more scientific, perhaps the conglomerates can then find a way to manage it so as to turn an adequate profit.

At least one noted economist sees this as a definite possibility.

Schuylkill-Carbon Co. Farmers Assn. meets

MAHONING VALLEY — The annual Spring meeting of the Schuylkill-Carbon Farmers Association was recently held at the Mahoning Valley Fire Company. The Auxiliary of the Fire Company served a ham and beef dinner to 190 guests.

The annual affair is held each year to keep farmers informed of their association, also to meet with county officials and state legislators.

Speaker for the evening was Keith Eckle, state board member from Clark Summitt. Eckle is a dairy farmer and vegetable grower in Lackawana County, where he farms with his father and brother. His message was on the interaction of the farm community, among other things. Eckle also stated that the farmer is caught in the spiral of inflation more so than his city counterpart, because of the different items related to agriculture.

If people want open space, fresh food products, he said, some way has to be devised to hold down farmer taxes and fix land prices so that farming can stay in Pennsylvania.

IS OXYGEN CONTROLLED

*WHAT IS AN "ENERGY–PAK" OXYGEN CONTROLLED FEED STORAGE SYSTEM?

The "Energy-Pak" "Oxygen Controlled" Storage System includes a solid, steel reinforced concrete wall with a tough epoxy coating on the inside wall and a cone shaped concrete roof All access openings to the Silage Storage area are round and fitted with air-tight gaskets These round openings are easily clamped tight These features help to control and limit the amount of oxygen that comes in contact with the feed

In operating an "Energy-Pak", prime importance is placed on closing the silo after each filling and feeding operation Proper use of this system significantly reduces the oxygen content in the silo and results in a more ideal condition for maintaining the quality of the feed put into it

Beef prices to increase 15 to 20 per cent

CHICAGO, Ill. — Consumers may face beef price increases in 1979 from 15 to 20 per cent over last year, reflecting a sharp reduction in beef supplies, Continental Bank agricultural specialists said recently.

"Per-capita beef supplies will drop almost nine per cent in 1979 to around 81 pounds per person, or the lowest level since 1973," said Terry L. Francl, agricultural economist in the bank's economic research division.

However, Francl said that as a result of higher prices, consumers probably will be buying less beef so that actual beef expenditures will be up only eight to 10 per cent over a year ago.

So far this year, retail beef prices have risen approximately twice as fast as during the same period in 1978, he said.

"The eight per cent decline in beef production witnessed thus far in 1979 reflects a sizable reduction in beef cattle inventories, which have dropped a total of 18 per cent since the 1975 peak," Francl said. He added that the severe Winter weather in January and February also played a role in reducing the already limited beef supplies.

"Pork and poultry production has been increasing, and with high beef prices, supplies of these meats will expand further, offsetting the decline in beef production," said Robert C. Vasko, vice president in the agribusiness division of Continental's Commercial Banking Services Department.

Vasko said that although broiler and turkey production increased seven per cent and five per cent respectively last year, broiler prices were up 11 per cent, and turkey prices rose 24 per cent. "As a result, producers are expanding output just as rapidly as physical facilities will permit," he said.

Francl said that a government report released recently confirmed that hog producers are planning to expand output at a rapid pace. "The present outlook is for annual pork production to rise 15 per cent in 1979 with the bulk of the increase coming in the second half of the year," he said.

"Total per-capita supplies of all red meats and poultry in 1979 will match or possibly exceed the 1978 level," the economist said. "Consumers will be faced with the choice of either bidding up the price of the shrinking supplies of beef or switching to the more abundant pork and poultry products."

Outside the U.S., demand for meat is increasing with rising standards of living, Francl said. As a result, the demand for U.S. feed grains and soybeans continues to grow, he added.

Although soybean exports will remain strong, with a 10 to 15 per cent increase in 1979 export volume, the outlook for corn and wheat is less favorable," Francl said. "U.S. corn exports to Russia should be at about the same level as last year, but wheat exports may be down five to 10 per cent due to a record wheat crop around the world."

Despite near-record incomes, U.S. farmers may face financing difficulties later this year, Vasko said.

"Bank loan demand, especially among rural banks, is expected to be strong again in 1979," he said. "At the same time, high interest rates coupled with interest rate ceilings imposed by state usury laws may serve to divert funds to other uses."

"Although usury laws differ widely from state to state, many states have ceiling rates in the eight to 11 per cent range," Vasko said. "With six-month Treasury bills rates averaging about 9 1/2 per cent and Fed funds running above 10 per cent, there are instances in which the maximum allowable interest rate on farm loans is unattractive to lenders."

"Fortunately, exemptions to these usury ceilings are sometimes available if farms are incorporated, if certain types of security can be pledged or if the loan is large," he said. "Still, there are likely to be cases in which farm borrowers incur difficulty in obtaining adequate funds."

Problems associated with the availability of credit, however, may be offset to some degree by another increase in net farm income, Francl said.

"Although it is highly unlikely that the increase in income will match the 40 per cent jump recorded in 1978, net farm income could rise 10 to 15 per cent on the strength of higher livestock prices," he said. "If this happens, net farm income would total about $31 billion, or the second highest level ever recorded and only slightly below the 1973 record of $33 billion."

N.Y. boy gets Brown Swiss award

BELOIT, Wis. — The 1978 Youth Achievement Winners have recently been announced by the National Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' Association. The Youth Achievement Award was initiated in 1974 to honor one outstanding Brown Swiss youth in each of the eight director districts in the United States. This year's winners were chosen from 21 entries by an anonymous committee.

The applications were not identified by name or town or even animal's names, thus were judged completely on the applicant's merit.

Some of the information requested on the application included the number of registered animals owned, classified and on official test, show participation and Brown Swiss and community activities and awards. They are also asked to tell of their duties on the farm and influence Brown Swiss has had on their lives.

All of this year's winners help with the work on the farm whether it be milking, feeding, cleanup or field work. Also, all of the winners were 4-H and/or FFA members and recipients of several awards and honors. The Youth winners also have all exhibited their Swiss at county, district, regional or national shows.

In addition to district winners, an overall National Youth Achievement Winner was chosen. District I came through with the National Winner with their entry, Ken Simpson, 17, of Port Jervis, N.Y.

The owner of 16 Swiss, Ken has had several winners in the show ring in addition to good production at home. He has won several herdsmanship and showmanship honors.

This past year Ken has received several scholarship awards. He is planning to attend college and study dairy science.

Ken helps with all the farm work on school vacations and milks nights and weekends during the school year.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Willis Simpson, Jr.

Cloister wins FFA dairy contest

Bob Fox, Mark Weiler, and Kevin Smoker know their dairy cattle. They won a state-wide contest at Penn State last Saturday.

EPHRATA — The Cloister FFA Chapter from Ephrata High School took double honors last Saturday when their "A" and "B" dairy cattle judging teams won the top two places in a state-wide contest held a week ago at Penn State University.

The judging contest, held annually at the Univeristy's dairy center, was the lead-off event of the 54th Annual Dairy Exposition, which comes to a climax on May 5. The contest involved young people from 4-H and FFA groups from across the state as well as amateur and professional collegiate judges from Penn State.

The contest consisted of eight placings classes and two reasons classes for 4-H and FFA divisions. Classes were judged in the morning. Reasons were presented the following afternoon.

Ephrata's "A" team consisted of seniors Kevin Smoker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smoker, Stevens R1; Robert Fox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fox, Lititz R1; and Mark Weiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Weiler, Stevens R1. Alternate for the team was Larry Burkholder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Burkholder, Lititz R4. Fox led the team with 417 points and a sixth place in overrall individual standings. He placed second in reasons with 87 points. Burkholder was fourth in reasons with 83 points and chalked up 385 points for the total effort. Smoker placed sixth in reasons (81 points) and eighth overall (415 points). Weiler had a total of 401 points, with 80 of them coming in reasons. The total score for the team was 1233 points. They were first in overall judging and also first in reasons.

The "B" team was led by Marvin Fox, brother of Robert. He amassed a total of 422 points in the contest, which earned him a third place in individual standings. He was fifth in reasons with 82 points. Also scoring high was James Groff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Groff, Stevens R1. Placing fifth in individual scoring, he had 418 total points, with 78 coming from the reasons part of the contest. Marvin Weiler, brother of Mark, scored with 384 points and Joanna Gehman, daughter of Mr. an Mrs. Lester Gehman, Ephrata R1 tallied 325 points. Miss Gehman served as the alternate on the team. The total team score was 1224 points. The team's overall second place is complemented by a third place in reasons.

Coach for the Ephrata teams was Lewis C. Ayres, vocational agriculture instructor at the high school who in previous years has guided teams to within two points of a national championship.

Also in the FFA division, Nelson Brenneman of Penn Manor High School had the high individual score and Doug Hershberger of Solanco High School was tops in reasons. Brenneman had 435 points, total, and Hershberger had 92 points in reasons. Hershberger was on Lancster County's championship 4-H dairy cattle judging team last year.

Fulton Grange to hold Open House

OAKRYN — Fulton Grange No. 66 met April 9 at the Oakryn Grange hall. Plans were made to hold "Open House" at the next meeting April 23, at 8 p.m. The public is invited. Mrs. Thomas Galbreath has prepared a special program for the occasion. Mrs. William Buffington, Lecturer of the Pa. State Grange, will be the speaker. The program will include special music, a skit and a brief history of the Grange. A social time will follow.

The annual "Youth Night" was observed with the young people filling officers' chairs and presenting the program. Thomas Charles Galbreath presided when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fite were taken in as members. Reports of the Grange tour to Williamsburg and Jamestown, Va. and the Grange supper April 7 were made. Fulton Grange will present two $25 awards to seniors graduating from Solanco High School in June.

The community service committee took a survey from people in attendance on needs of the community. The Women's Activities committtee announced that they would again be sponsoring the National Grange sewing contest and entries must be made prior to April 30. Many prizes are offered. Mrs. Harry Baker, chairman of the local committee, has entry blanks.

Lecturer Mrs. Thomas Galbreath announced the following State Grange contests for this year and asked for participation: talent which includes vocal, instrumental, quartettes and family musical groups; art; photographs and instant pictures.

Fulton Grange will host Lancaster County Pomona Grange No. 71 on April 21, at 8 p.m. when the fifth degree will be conferred.

Mrs. Clifford Holloway III, youth lecturer, presented the program. Mrs. Lloyd Welk, accompanied by Glenn Hough, rendered a vocal solo. Sherry Albert, interpreter for the deaf, sang a solo in sign language. She directed the audience in doing the ABC's in sign language, demonstrated lip reading and related problems of the deaf, explaining how to be helpful to them. Mrs. Mary Yost, who has several family members who are deaf, told of problems they have and anxieties they experience. A voluntary contribution was then given to an organization to benefit the deaf.

Cloister FFA

GOT TORQUE AMPLIFIER, CLUTCH AND PRESSURE PLATE PROBLEMS WITH YOUR IH TRACTORS?

There is a company in the West that has been rebuilding T.A. units for several years now and having excellent results. The basic reason for their success is the sprag clutch they use. In the areas where they have been selling, they even have IH dealers that use this unit almost entirely.

(1) They feel this sprag clutch is giving less problems than even IH's new beefed up unit because of the design of the sprags.
(2) This unit can be bought as individual parts which is many times all you need or as a complete renewed unit ready to set in your tractor.
(3) They have a warranty up to 2000 hrs., or 3 years . . . and . . .
(4) They don't cost any more and to most buyers they are costing less than from the big company. They offer same day shipment by UPS or Greyhound bus. They also have a program on rebuilt Dynalife clutches and pressure plates.

If you want more information write me and I will get the literature to you. Raymond B. Leaman, RD #1, Willow Street, Penna. 17584.

-Open Spaces-
Historic Places?

By SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Writer

Mrs. Samuel W. Morris shares with others across our nation the conviction that America's historical sites and open countryside deserve preservation. Living in the midst of an area rich in history and natural beauty in northern Chester County, Eleanor Morris spends many of her days and nights researching, directing and promoting conservation and preservation, serving as president of the French and Pickering Creeks Conservation Trust, Inc.

The Trust is a non-profit, scientific, educational and charitable corporation. Its purpose is to preserve historic sites, open space, natural or conservation areas in the watersheds of the French and Pickering Creeks and their tributaries, according to the official statement of purpose.

Founded in 1967 to protect the creek lands in their natural state, the Trust works in seven townships through which the creeks flow. The creeks are bordered by Hopewell and French Creek Parks on the north and by Valley Forge Park on the southeast. Less than a mile from the intersection of Route 23 and 100 is the village of Coventryville, the home office of the trust.

Coventry House, fittingly enough, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and has many connections with the early French Creek iron industry and Benjamin Franklin. An area with iron ore deposits, Coventryville was the site of the first Chester County forge in 1717, the second to be in Pennsylvania. Hopewell Furnace, which is preserved today as an early iron making community, and Warwick Furnace, where the Franklin Stoves were cast, also developed in this area.

Mrs. Morris explained that the first Franklin Stove was made for the parlor at the southwestern corner of Coventry House. It is recorded that the house was built in 1719 by Samuel Nutt, pioneer of the early iron industry in the French Creek Valley. It later belonged to Robert Grace who managed the Warwick and Coventry Forge. Grace was a friend of Franklin and a member of the reading group – the Junta – which Franklin organized. Grace and another friend offered to establish Franklin firmly in the printing business. Franklin showed his gratitude to Grace by giving him the plans for the famous fireplace stove.

Tradition has it that the first stove was tried out in the Coventry House parlor.

In the 1820's, the house passed into the hands of Colonel Caleb North. From then, a succession of owners is listed on the annuals of history. In 1966, however, three local residents purchased the house and fifteen acres to keep it from being developed. December 30, 1976, Coventry House was purchased by the Trust. A Federal Historical Preservation Fund grant, private donations and generous arrangements on the part of the sellers made the purchase possible.

Plans call for the gradual restoration of the house as careful research, architectural consultation, and planning and funding progress.

Working out of the "shell" of the Coventry House, the French and Pickering Creeks Trust continues its efforts to preserve the watersheds. Within the two watersheds are many such sites of historical importance. Since its beginning twelve years ago the Trust has inventoried and registered 102 sites and structures on the Pennsylvania Inventory of Historic Sites and Landmarks and has placed 30 on the National Register of Historic Places.

The research and documentation required for such registry is carried out primarily by parttime help, checked and properly recorded and processed by one fulltime staff person and Mrs. Morris who does not receive monetary compensation for her work.

In addition to these registry projects, Mrs. Morris explained that the Trust has worked for the enactment of Historic District zoning ordinances, the preservation of agricultural land and conservation stream use.

Recently, the Trust has been requested and granted funding to study the French Creek to see if it is eligible for designation by the Legislature as one of Pennsylvania's scenic streams. Such a designation would result in preservation of the creek and its banks in its natural state for future generations.

Addressing a conference last month, Mrs. Morris stated, "Although we now know what should be saved, and how to go about it, our problem is how to impart our knowledge to those who own the land. Knowledge must be made known to those who do not share, as of yet, our concerns, and to government officials, who through their powers of planning and zoning – and the purse – exercise considerable control."

This Trust is trying to work with the individual property owner to ensure that the land will remain open, and with government bodies on the local, state and federal level and with other preservation groups.

Pipelines, gas lines, underground cables, high transmission electric lines cross this area taking power to the populus in the northeast. In 1965, an electric company took 16 acres of the Morris's farm for a power line.

Highways, dams, sewer plants, real estate development and a nuclear plant being constructed within the area make preservation of open land an uphill battle.

By out-right gifts of land to the Trust, by purchases, greatly limited by lack of funds, and by efforts of township supervisors and planning commissions some of the land along the creeks has been preserved.

However, more of the land has been preserved in its natural state as a result of the Trust's leadership in researching, educating and fostering a preservation technique called "easement."

Five years ago this last March, the Trust drew together the expertise of many organizations from across the nation in order to present a conference on easements to inform people of what they are and how they operate. An easement is a legal agreement between a landowner and a qualified private, non-profit organization or public body in which the landowner promises to protect the essential character of his property without giving up ownership or possession. Such an agreement is perpetual and applies to future owners as well. There are a number of benefits from such an agreement for the owner as well as the benefits to posterity which will share in the scenic beauty preserved.

An easement does not give the public the right of access to such property. It remains private property protected from intrusion. The conservation group is part of the agreement in that it is entrusted to enforce the easement.

Homestead Notes

In the five years since the first conference on easement the Trust has received 22 open space easement agreements covering 1311 acres.

In addition to the immediate area's consciousness raising concerning easements, the first conference proved to be a national informational tool. Funded by a grant from the Philadelphia Foundation, a publication of the conference proceedings became a much requested guidebook for many individuals and organizations interested in this form of preservation.

Within a day of the fifth anniversary of the first easement conference, The Trust held a second conference this March. Over 150 representatives of private organizations, government agencies and municipalities from Maine to Virginia and as far away as Colorado attended the day-long session.

Eleanor Morris explained that the Trust combines both historic site preservation and open land conservation while many organizations have only one emphasis such as a watershed. Seeing things as a part of the whole rather than working with bits and pieces or concentrating on one particular project requires much work and dedication to overcome the frustrations.

Mrs. Morris has served as the president of the Trust since 1973. She is on the boards of both the Historical Foundation of Pennsylvania and Preservation Action, Washington, D.C. For five years she served as a member of the Valley Forge State Park Commission until the Park was turned over to the Department of Interior. A graduate of Bryn Mawr College, she holds a Master's Degree in History from that institution.

She is the mother of seven children and wife of the former Representative of the 155th District. Mr. Morris, one of the founders of the Trust, having served as its president from 1967 to 1971, has operated a dairy farm in Chester County since 1946. After serving in the legislature from 1971 to 1978 he recently returned to his law practice. During his term in the legislature, he was vice-chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

Living on their farm which touches the French Creek they both share a great concern for the preservation of existing open land. As Eleanor often states in her written and oral presentations, "Reverence for the land prompts an obligation to preserve it. As we say in the Trust, there is only one chance to save the land and when that chance is gone it is gone forever."

Thanks to the dedicated efforts of such as Eleanor and Sam Morris, and the French and Pickering Creeks Trust, Inc., all of it will not be gone forever.

OPEN SPACES, HISTORIC PLACES — the motto of the French and Pickering Creeks Conservation Trust, Inc. This non-profit organization in northern Chester County works to widen open spaces and help preserve historic sites in the watersheds of the French and Pickering Creeks.

The Trust stands ready with suggestions of how to preserve the beauty of these two historic watersheds. They invite inquiries by the public. For additional information contact: French and Pickering Creeks Conservation Trust, Inc., R2, Pottstown, PA 19464.

Ladies Have You Heard?

WORK EXPERIENCES FOR TEENS IMPORTANT

Adolescents face a number of important decisions in their teen years. One of the biggest of these is choosing a career. Work experiences during the high school years can provide youth with opportunities to explore the world of work while gaining experience as workers.

Part-time and Summer jobs help youth learn to work under supervision and to get along with superiors and fellow workers. Work experience has much value for youth in later life, too. A work record that shows an individual to be reliable and responsible on the job is important to young people when being considered for jobs.

Work experience may also expose the youth to a variety of career possibilities and motivate a youth to seek further education if this is necessary for success in a chosen field.

Working is valuable in the maturing process. Youth who have shown themselves to be capable workers and cooperative co-workers are viewed in a more positive way by both college admissions officials and future employers.

Here are some suggestions for teens seeking jobs.

Surveys have shown that employers prefer job applicants to appear as neat, competent persons. Casual attire, even though it may be both appropriate and allowed on the job, is neither appropriate for visits to prospective employers to fill out applications nor later for job interviews.

Teens applying for jobs should leave the blue jeans, the shorts, the athletic outfits, T-shirts and the like at home in the closet. Remember, the job applicant should appear to be serious about landing the job. Sports clothes or very casual attire project an appearance of being less than serious about work

According to surveys, employers are impressed by young men wearing slacks and neat, conservative sports shirts. A shirt and tie is a good idea if the job requires meeting the public. A sports coat is an added plus. Young women would be wise to wear tailored pants suits, simple skirts and tops, or simple dresses with no see-through or low-cut styles. Hose and low-heeled shoes complete a well-groomed appearance. Jewelry, make-up and elaborate hairdos should be kept to a minimum.

TIPS ON PATTERN, FABRIC SELECTION FOR DIETERS

Dieters who have put off selecting patterns and fabrics for home sewing until they lose weight can now take heart. There are ways to disguise the present figure of the soon-to-be-slim person as well as to construct clothes that will be wearable after weight loss.

The solution is to select patterns with few seams and design details. Major pattern companies offer simple to sew patterns which can be made without complicated construction details.

As the figure slims down, seams can be taken in on this type pattern without noticeably altering the fashion silhouette. Avoid patterns with pockets in side seams or high dolman sleeves which begin near the waistline. Garments which fit close to the body are easier to alter later.

To further get slimmed-down effect, select fabrics carefully. Bulky fabrics visibly add pounds. Slinky fabrics cling to the body and emphasizes bulges and curves which often do not need emphasizing.

It is better to select smooth fabrics without too much surface detail because they have a slimming effect.

Large checks and plaids do not contribute to the slimming effect and may make altering more difficult. Fabrics with medium to small designs are more satisfactory.

Kendy's Kollumn

by Kendace Borry

Uh-oh, I thought to myself for what seemed like the millionth time. Spring must definitely be here. The woolies are crawling under, sqeezing through, and vaulting over the fence.

I'm sure by now that most of you non-sheep people out there are saying, for heaven's sake, why doesn't the poor girl just go out and build some new fences. Then those sheep wouldn't be getting out every Spring

Oh, how I wish it would be that easy.

I can remember the last time I was involved in building fence My dad decided that this was going to be the most scientific, complete up-to date sheep fence ever built Using all his years of college engineering skills as background, he drew blueprints of fences guaranteed to outsmart every grass-hungary sheep that ever roamed the earth Evenings were spent studying catalogs as he weighed the pros and cons of woven wire versus board and barbed wire fence

Even the table conversations at dinner time centered on how glorious this marvelous creation was going to be.

The Saturday finally came when I tramped out to the pasture, following his lead on the tractor that pulled a wagon load of essential fence-building materials The sun was shining and hopes ran high that soon the sheep chasing days would be gone forever.

As the day progressed, I had my first doubts about the matter. As we worked and toiled in the hot sun, one by one those pestering woolies would wander over, survey the work, giggle, and hightail it back to the flock.

There is nothing quite so demoralizing as a sheep giggling.

But we strove on, tightening wire, hammering stables, and adding my own personal touch, I managed to trip over the barbed wire in grand style

Finally the project was finished. There stood the greatest sheep fence you'd ever want to see. I'd swear a fly would have had trouble finding his way from one side to the other.

That Spring evening the Borrys went to bed with weary but happy hearts

The next morning we awoke to find the sheep out. And although my dad tramped up and down along that fence many, many times, he never quite determined how they did it.

But there was an awful lot of giggling heard in the barn.

In the past, clothes were made to last (and last)

By SALLY BAIR
Staff Writer

In the Pennsylvania German culture in this area, work clothing was made extremely well, and was immediately patched if torn or worn. All clothing was made to last, and the "Sunday best" clothing was often willed to a daughter by a mother.

Ellen J. Gehret, who has authored a book on early clothing from this area, described some of the clothes commor to the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century at a special lecture at the Landis Valley Farm Museum. Her talk was part of an antique lecture series being held on Wednesday evenings in March.

According to Mrs. Gehret, the clothing was strictly utilitarian, with little in the way of decoration. A woman's "pocket" was one exception and many had some ornamentation, but usually the creativity was expressed on quilts and hand towels, not clothing.

In the Pennsylvania German culture, Mrs. Gehret said, the wool was spun at home, and then dyed and woven by a professional. Clothing was hand sewn, occasionally by a local seamstress or tailor. "They seldom made a tissue pattern," she said, explaining that they usually worked from another garment of the same size.

Work clothing, she found in her research, usually had overcast or flat fell seams. Also, clothing of that period was "aired" rather than laundered so frequently.

She said men wore a shirt, vest and breeches at all times, and in all seasons. They also wore a folded kerchief around their necks and broad hats. "Most men had two changes of clothes, with perhaps an extra shirt or breeches. A coat or great coat was expected to last a lifetime. Usually it had capes over the shoulder.

The shirts of that era were made of squares and rectangles, with a gusset under the armpit for movement. "It was loose and comfortable, and featured a very long shirttail." The long shirttail, she explained, took the place of underwear "to keep the linsey woolsey breeches from picking." Underwear was not worn then.

Breeches were cut full, with a front fall opening. There was a pocket and a watch pocket, and buttons sewn on to accommodate suspenders.

Leather trousers were not uncommon, and an example she had at the meeting were hand sewn with linen thread. There were bress buttons, a gusset at the waist and ties at the ankle.

A women's garment consisted of a two-piece dress. The top was called a "short gown," which was made for easy expansion for pregnancy. The bottom was called a "petticoat." There was also a kerchief, apron and head gear, along with stockings, barters and a low heeled shoe. A pocket or double pocket was standard part of the garment, and a wool mantel was worn for work.

Caps worn then were "generally of white material, with lace or ribbon inserts," Mrs. Gehret said. Hair was never cut, but pulled back and held in place with tortoise shell combs.

The bodice of the "short gown" was made of homespun, with the sleeves cut in one piece with the bodice. Tucks were taken in at the back. Aprons were buttoned and stroke gathered, although some were self-gathering with a tape run through a casing. Mrs. Gehret said the petticoat was "worn and worn, and patched and patched." Underwear consisted of a shift worn under the short gown and petticoat.

Children, according to Mrs. Gehret, were outfitted like adults, and often wore used clothing. "Perfect fit and color coordination was not important. Warm and decent was what counted."

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is difficult for me to realize how things have changed in the last twenty years here on the farm. People who are only twenty years old think that twenty years is a "long time" but folks my age know that time seems to pass quickly.

If I didn't have my 1959 diary to read, those bygone days would not be as distinct in my mind. We had four children then–from two to 10 years old. They did many errands for us. The boys threw down the ensilage and loaded manure with a fork from a pile. Now Allen has all of this work automated as he has to do it alone. And, I no longer have someone to rake the yard, bring fruit jars from the cellar or dust the furniture. Of course, there no longer are toys and books all over the floor and little heads to shampoo on Saturday night. And there is no one building a tree house in the back yard this year.

That Spring of 1959 I bought a pound of onions to plan for 14 cents and got the children 3 pair of shoes for $14.95. Now that won't buy even one pair. We also bought 20 lb. of shad for 13 cents a pound. Although, I noticed that our milk check was only one-tenth its present size as we didn't have many cows. Then too, I washed all the milking equipment by hand morning and evening and now with much more water and detergent everything is cleaned with the throwing of a switch.

This Easter there will be no egg hunts nor recitations to learn for a church program. But hopefully there will also be no measles, pink eye or stitches to be removed from falling against a metal gate.

Some of our children will be home and we will follow the tradition of coloring eggs on the kitchen table and baskets will be hidden and hunted early Easter morning. Some eggs will be colored with cooked onion skins (even as my Grandmother did) and they'll have rust, yellow and orange designs. I'll dig dandelions for a salad and cook smoked beef tongue as that is another traditional food that we have every Easter. Some things don't change.

In the past

Everyone wore stockings, and they were hand knit, sometimes with embroidered initials on it. Some were made with removable toes, so that when the toe wore through that part could be removed and redone. Sometimes, material was sewn on the inside to lengthen the life of the stockings, and for comfort.

Folk lore grew up with clothing, Mrs. Gehret said. For instance, on the wedding day it was customary for a man to wear a shirt his bride had made. It was also said that eggs hatched better if carried to the barn in a woman's apron.

Stir constantly. Beat egg yolks with some of the hot custard. Then add to remaining custard and cook for two minutes longer. Chill. Beat egg whites until stiff. Add four tablespoons of sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Drop meringue by the spoon onto chilled custard. Top with red jelly. BAKED CARAMEL CUSTARD

1 quart milk
5 eggs
1/ cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup caramel syrup
1/4 teaspoon salt
Butter

Heat the milk slightly with the sugar, salt, and caramel syrup. Be sure the caramel syrup is entirely dissolved before this mixture is poured into the lightly beaten eggs. Add the vanilla. Pour the mixture into custard cups, and add a small piece of butter to each. Bake in a pan surrounded by water in a slow oven (325 Degrees F.). Test by placing the point of a knife in the center of the custard and if it comes out clean remove the cups of custard at once from the hot water. The custards may be served either hot or cold with caramel syrup if more caramel flavor is desired.

Sugar can be caramelized easily by placing it in a heavy skillet over slow even heat, and stirring it constantly until it melts and becomes a heavy brown syrup. As soon as it reaches this stage take it from the fire at once, and use it for flavoring and sweetening the custard.

There may be more to herbicide incorporation than you know

Discs like these are one of the effective ways for mixing chemicals into the soil before planting. The choice of materials, method of their application, and weather conditions are extremely important considerations.

UNIVERSITY PARK — Studies at Penn State University using different minimum and conventional tillage combinations to incorporate herbicides show that weed control can vary with methods of incorporation — even when the same rates of herbicide are used.

"The prime motive of this study was not to evaluate a herbicide," says Professor Lynn Hoffman, agronomist at the Rock Springs agronomy farm, "but to compare various incorporation methods and their overall effects on weed control. We used equal rates of Sutan + preplant-applied herbicide on all plots, but weed control varied with each trial."

Dr. Nathan Hartwig, University weed control specialist, also participated in the study.

"We decided to do this study primarily because of the increasing interest among farmers in minimum tillage," Hoffman says. "Farmers often encounter many weed control problems after the first year with weeds like nutsedge and fall panicum. Thiocarbamate herbicides like Sutan +, which have to be incorporated, work very well on these weeds. This study took a hard look at incorporation options with popular minimum tillage equipment, as well as with conventional tillage."

Agronomists at Penn State impregnated a fluorescent dye on a clay bonding material, incorporated it with different tillage combinations and used black light photography to evaluate the depth and uniformity of incorporation.

"Depth and uniformity of application are two key factors when using thiocarbamate herbicides like Sutan +," Hoffman says. "The bonding material we used with the dye is the same material used by Stauffer Chemical Company in making Sutan + 10-G."

The soil at the Rock Springs agronomy farm is a Murrill silt loam, and Hoffman says incorporation results could have been different if the experiment was done on a heavy clay soil. But Hoffman notes, "On a seed bed that is ready to be worked — one that is not too wet — you should get the same incorporation results regardless of soil type.

"We looked at a rather wide spectrum of potential tillage cominations that are practical for herbicide incorporation on most farms. There are other methods, but obviously, we could not include every one in the study."

The agronomists elected to use a medium, three-pound rate of Sutan + and not a combination of Sutan +/atrazine or Sutan +/Bladex. Hoffman says using one herbicide lessens variables and makes it easier to distinguish weed control provided by Sutan + from degree of weed control resulting from different incorporation methods. An adjacent check plot was left for each of the 12 incorporation treatments.

Since corn was not planted until May 31, a short-season hybrid was used (Doeblers 50X 90-day). Fertility was maintained equally on all plots. Hoffman adds that overall weed control probably would have been better if a full season corn was used because it would have shaded any late-germinating weeds. Each plot, however, did receive a post-directed application of 2,4-D/Banvel on June 12.

"The predominant weeds in this study (not by choice) were yellow foxtail, fall panicum and witchgrass," Hoffman says. "It would have been a whole different ball game, however, if we were going after perennial weeds like yellow nutsedge or quackgrass. Most annual grasses — about 90 percent — germinate in the top one-inch layer of soil. Some tools in this study, like the cultimulcher and the Lely Roterra, consistently incorporated the Sutan + evenly, but at a shallow depth. The weed control in these plots (treatments 4,5,8,11) was good, but if we had been after nutsedge or another perennial, we may not have received as good control. Perennial weeds normally germinate deeper in the soil and the herbicide should be placed in the germinating zone of the target weed. As a general rule, herbicides like Sutan + should be incorporated in the top two-three inches."

Hoffman says almost every treatment involving a moldboard plow showed good results in terms of incorporation depth and uniformity, and weed control. But again, Hoffman stresses that weed control percentages could have been different if perennial weeds infested the plots.

"Many alfalfa growers have expressed interest in using the cultimulcher for incorporation, but not for corn," Hoffman says. "They want to use the cultimulcher to incorporate Eptam in new seedings of alfalfa. The cultimulcher leaves a very firm seed bed."

Hoffman says he likes the heavy offset disk as a primary minimum tillage tool, but says he does not like to recommend it for incorporating herbicides after seeing the results in this study.

"The heavy disk should not be used as an incorporation tool alone," Hoffman says. "What happens almost invariably is that very little, or no, material is left on the surface after the pass. You end up burying the material almost as deep as you would using a moldboard plow. The heavy disk incorporates the herbicide in a spiked pattern in the top seven inches of soil. It's very uneven. Perhaps, it would do better if it was followed by a Midwestern harrow or similar tool."

Hoffman does say, however, that the heavy disk might incorporate better if it has hydraulic lifters to adjust blade depth. "But that defeats the whole purpose of a heavy disk," Hoffman adds. "The heavy disk is designed to float."

While some specialists say the spring tooth harrow should not be used to incorporate, others swear by it. In the Penn State study the spring tooth harrow incorporated most of the herbicide in the top 2 to 3½ inches of soil, although some material was incorporated as deep as 6 inches where the teeth of the harrow passed.

The Penn State study included one power-driven incorporation tool, the Lely Roterra. "Lely has done a lot of work with herbicide incorporation and we wanted to see if we would observe similar results," Hoffman says. "In essence, the tool does everything Lely says it does. It performed well in this study."

Asked what incorporation method he recommended based on findings in this study and other observations, Hoffman said, "If I had to bet my money, I would incorporate the herbicide with a tandem disk harrow, regardless of which primary tillage tool is used. I think this system gives the most consistent incorporation in all types of soils, for all types of weeds.

"I'm a strong advocate of farmers tooling up to do the job themselves when using preplant incorporated herbicides," Hoffman concludes. "Moisture level and temperature are key factors when incorporating. When you're at the mercy of a custom applicator, it's usually pretty hard to get him to come when you want him . . . when conditions are right for incorporating.

"If you're tooled up to incorporate, you can do it whenever you want . . . when the time is right. It may take you two afternoons instead of one day to get it all done, but

N.J. Holsteins ready for auction

HARMONY, N.J. - Seventy outstanding young Holsteins enter the sales ring at Harmony, N.J. on April 25. The occasion is the New Jersey State Calf and Bred Heifer Sale, an annual auction sale sponsored by the New Jersey Holstein Association.

The gavel is set to signal the start of the sale at 7 p.m. reports William Teets, Lebanon, serving as co-chairman with Frank Gibbs, Allamuchy.

There will be 56 heifer calves and 14 bred heifers in the sale, consigned by over 60 breeders and youth. Auctioneer will be Charles Backus, reading pedigrees will be Horace Backus, representing R. A. Backus, Inc., Mexico, N.Y.

The sires represented by daughters in the sale include many of the Holstein breed's best. They include Round Oak Rag Apple Elevation, Paclamar Astronaut, Paclamar Bootmaker, Hillhaven Standout Job, Citation R Maple, to name few, says the sale chairman. And he continues, to make the sale even more appealing, the cows and cow families in the pedigrees are among New Jersey's best.

A great calf consigned from Hunterdon County is Windy Crest Cora, a stylish individual bred by Howard J. Sutton, Califon. Sired by plus-proven Ljuf-Lage Mose Lucky Star, she is out of an "Elevation" daughter producing extremely well. She milked up to 93 pounds a day as a two-year-old. And she in turn is out of a Paclamar Astronaut daughter with a four-year-old record of 24,370 pounds milk and 1080 pounds butterfat in 305 days.

There are many other outstanding calves scheduled for the sale. The New Jersey sale has produced some very valuable animals through the years, says Teets. Perhaps best known in Holstein circles is Andfar Astronaut Cinderella, selling as a calf in the 1972 sale. Now with a record of 31,600 pounds milk and 1189 pounds butterfat she sold recently in the Curtiss Classic for over $30,000.

Ag research budget cut opposed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A proposal by the Carter Administration to cut nearly $3 million in research funds from the USDA Northern Regional Research Center (NRRC) "is one of the most ill-timed and short-sighted attempts at 'savings' imaginable," according to Robert C. Liebenow, President of Corn Refiners Association, Inc.

Liebenow told members of both the House and Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittees last month that funding for the NRRC, located in Peoria, Illinois, is helping develop numerous technologies which could reduce spiraling petroleum imports by the United States. "The dollars which the President proposes to cut from the budget at the NRRC are enough to buy only 203,000 barrels of oil from our foreign suppliers. That's about as much oil as we import in 33 minutes," he told the Subcommittees. Liebenow, who represents producers of corn sweeteners, starches, feeds and oil told the members that cutting the NRRC budget is "the inflated equivalent of 'penny wise and pound foolish,'" and asked the Congress to restore the $2.84 million slated for removal from the budget.

Major projects underway at the NRRC concentrate on development of alcohol fuels based on grains, replacement of petroleum-derived chemicals with substitutes made from renewable corn starch, timed-release pesticides and fertilizers which can reduce pollution and increase farm efficiency and replacement of packaging material with biodegradable starch packaging.

Grain comments deadline stretched

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The deadline for public comment on rules proposed for official inspection and weighing of grain has been extended from May 1 to June 18, on the recommendation of the Grain Standards Act Advisory Committee.

It is now proposed that elevators which ship less than 15,000 metric tons of export grain in a calendar year be exempt from inspection and weighing requirements. The original draft did not include provisions for such a waiver.

The proposed regulations would also require FGIS personnel to identify themselves before entering an elevator, and to follow all safety requirements while inside the facility.

Leland E. Bartelt, FGIS administrator, said Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has asked the General Services Administration to extend the committee for another year. Bartelt said each member has agreed to continue serving.

"The committee's work has been valuable in dealing with the complex issues we face," Bartelt said. "We need outside input and the job has not been completed. Much remains to be done."

STABILIZED NITROGEN

It's 8 bushels better.

You can get four dollars back for every dollar you invest in N-Serve* nitrogen stabilizer.

Because N-Serve stabilizes nitrogen. And stabilized nitrogen increases corn yields an average of 8 bushels per acre over regular nitrogen.

How do we know? Because stabilized nitrogen has been used on farms like yours throughout the U.S. And over several years, under varying weather, soil and moisture conditions, the yields prove it.

Stabilized nitrogen is, on the average, 8 bushels better than regular nitrogen.

So this spring, ask your dealer to add N-Serve to your anhydrous, liquid or dry nitrogen. Your nitrogen will be stabilized, and your yield improved.

N-Serve stabilizes nitrogen. And stabilized nitrogen is better.

8 bushels better.

On being a farm wife

—And other hazards

By JOYCE BUPP

Tomorrow, millions of Christians around the world will pause to celebrate Easter.

We'll remember how, through the promise of the Resurrection, mankind has been given a second chance.

Here, in the rich farmlands of southcentral Pennsylvania, we are poignantly aware of the blessing and responsibility of a second chance, after the sobering confrontation with the nuclear age.

Three Mile Island will stand as an awesome reminder of just how tenuous and precious our existence is, and will, hopefully, set us to searching the depths of our almost total reliance on technology.

Undoubtedly, there is a need for increased improvement and safety in nuclear systems, as there is in absolutely everything that human hands fashion and operate. With this nuclear second chance comes the opportunity also to research and develop other sources of energy, like coal, solar, thermal and wind.

And, through this experience we've shared, beneficial knowledge and a deeper understanding and awareness of the might of atomic power will emerge.

Yet, the fact remains glaringly clear that no lives were lost, no one was hospitalized, systems did function in spite of apparent human intervention, and catastrophe was averted.

While technical skill, knowledge, and even maybe a smidgeon of luck helped, let's not forget the more compelling power of the Almighty, who just happens to be in the business of granting second chances to us.

Maybe now we should use that second chance to focus on some devastating social problems that are more terrifying and crippling to society than our recent brush with radiation.

Suppose, for instance, that the tremendous force of the media, the attention of hundreds of reporters, the hours of air-wave news time and the millions of printed words that poured out tales of nuclear fear and outrage were instead directed at stirring up apathy over problems like:

–Thousands of innocent victims killed each year by drunken drivers;

--murderers, rapists, muggers and petty thieves, all too often left go free, or punished with a slap on the fingers, a short sentence, or parole;

–the incredible waste of minds and bodies by drug abuse;

–a truly frightening number of citizens who refuse to register, or vote, or get involved in the peaceful and orderly righting of wrongs through personal concern.

Let's use this second chance to examine our wasteful and materially-oriented lifestyles, and to change that please-don't-ask-me-to-get-involved attitude.

Maybe that's the message this Easter brings us in the wake of the chaos that accompanied a crisis on an island in the middle of a river in southcentral Pennsylvania.

Contestants sought for dairy princess pageant

By SALLY BAIR
Staff Writer

LANCASTER - Lancaster County's Dairy Princess Promotion Committee is seeking qualified contestants for the 1979 Dairy Princess contest to be held June 16, 1979 at the Farm and Home Center.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Stauffer, Ephrata R1, are chairing this year's events and noted that contestants will have the opportunity to promote dairy products and the dairy industry.

To be eligible, contestants must be a daughter of a dairy farmer, a dairy farm manager, herdsman or dairy farm owner during this year, or must own more than one dairy animal prior to May 1, 1979.

Contestants must have completed their junior year of high school and not reach their 22nd birthday by December 31, 1979. Contestants must be single and never married and have their parents or guardian's consent.

According to Barbara Stauffer, Lancaster County's winner will receive a wardrobe and will participate in the state training seminar in July and the state Dairy Princess contest in September. All contestants will receive valuable gifts and make lasting friendships.

Barbara encouraged all eligible girls to enter the contest, noting that high school seniors as well as college students can fulfill their responsibilities to the dairy industry. She stressed the opportunity for personal growth for all contestants through sessions on poise and make-up, and a dairy promotion event.

She noted that if the county winner is selected Pennsylvania Dairy princess she will receive a $300 cash award. The first and second runners-up also receive cash prizes. The state title is honorary and requires no interruption of school or regular employment plans.

Interested girls should contact Barbara at 717-733-4843 for applications and further information. Application deadline is May 12.

Conservation districts tackle water quality

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The fierce windstorms of the 1930's which earned the period the name "Great Dust Bowl Days" did more than kick up the Midwest's soil and spew it across the continent. They raised the fighting spirit of thousands of rural Americans who banded together into soil conservation districts to fight the erosion that was ravaging the nation's cropland.

The first conservation districts were formed in 1937. They were headed up by volunteers, usually local leaders from the farm community. It was their job to convince their neighbors to try soil and water conserving practices such as contour stripcropping, diversions, terraces, ponds and grassed waterways. Technical expertise was provided by agencies including the USDA's Soil Conservation Service, Cooperative Extension Service, Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service and Forest Service.

Today there are more than 3000 soil conservation districts in the nation. Maryland has one in each county except in Frederick where there are two. Baltimore City is the only jurisdiction in the state not covered.

A subdivision of state government, Maryland districts have no legislative, taxation, or policing powers. They are still run by a board of five volunteer supervisors. And, they still depend on the voluntary cooperation of fellow landowners to carry out their programs.

Controlling erosion on farmland remains a major concern of districts. But as the pollution grew and resource problems became more complex, they expanded their horizons. Today they also deal with urban sediment control, storm water management, drainage, flood control, shoreline protection and wildlife habitat development. They work with a wide range of people from farmers to local governments, educators, builders and businessmen.

One major new responsibility to come to districts in recent years is their involvement in Section 208 of the 1077 Clean Water Act. Working through the State Soil Conservation Committee, districts will help farmers comply with the agricultural portion of the state's water quality program when it is approved this year by the governor.

Basically, they will continue to assist landowners plan and install tried and true practices that will also help keep the sediment, pesticides, animal wastes and other nonpoint pollutants contained in runoff from polluting streams.

Although 208 carries with it a hint of enforcement for diehards who refuse to cooperate, William S. Sutton, president of the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts, says districts will continue to emphasize the voluntary aspects of the program.

As he sees it, the district's role is to educate farmers about what needs to be done and to offer assistance before they are cited for a water quality violation.

Sutton says he feels districts will be more effective in working with local farmers in achieving water quality than, for instance, a large bureaucracy like the Environmental Protection Agency. EPA, which has overall responsibility for carrying out the Clean Water Act, agreed to allow districts to handle the agricultural portion because of their long background in erosion and sediment control.

"The 208 program contains a certain amount of theory and a certain amount of practical application," says Sutton. "Districts can tailor the land management

Boost expected in U.S. ag exports

CHICAGO, Ill. – Senator Herman E. Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, predicted recently that booming U.S. farm exports would receive a further boost from the agricultural provisions of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations (MTN) now nearing conclusion in Geneva.

The Georgia Democrat said agricultural exports are now "clearly the brightest spot in our international trade picture," resulting in a $15 billion net favorable balance last year. Overall, however, the U.S. experienced a $28 billion trade deficit in 1978.

While cautioning that the agreement itself will not solve the U.S. trade deficit, Talmadge said it was his "preliminary judgment that the final agreement would be helpful in furthering U.S. agricultural trade."

"I believe there is every reason to hope that the Multilateral Trade Agreement will protect our existing agricultural exports and provide the basis for further gains," Talmadge said in a speech prepared for delivery to the English International Commodities Conference in Chicago.

In discussing the tentative agricultural provisions of the agreement, Talmadge said the U.S. had been offered concessions by other countries affecting existing trade in the range of $3.6 to $4 billion. U.S. offers to other countries on existing trade total $2.8 to $3 billion, Talmadge said. He said concessions involving quotas and duties are expected to produce another $400 million annually in new agricultural exports for the United States.

This anticipated new trade, Talmadge said, would be mainly in tobacco, citrus, poultry, and beef.

Talmadge expressed regret that U.S. negotiators had not been able to alter the Common Agricultural Policy of the European Community and that the Japanese had refused to "significantly modify" their import quotas.

But Talmadge said the agreement would establish a "jawboning mechanism for applying pressure on signatory countries to freer trade barriers."

"This mechanism is the International Agricultural Committee Council that will provide a forum from which we can continue to hammer away at the protective agricultural policies of Japan and the European Community," Talmadge said.

"It is important that we bend every effort to assure the Common Market, Japan and other countries that the U.S. is a reliable supplier of agricultural commodities," he added. "They need proven assurance from us that they can depend on the United States for an even larger proportion of their agricultural imports -- thereby saving money for their consumers and building additional markets for American agriculture."

Talmadge said he understood that a final agreement in the Geneva negotiations would likely be reached by mid-April and that the enabling legislation would be submitted by the President to Congress in May. Under the special procedures established for Congressional review of the agreement, Talmadge said he did not expect a final vote before the Fall of 1979.

practices required to the local situation to meet water quality guidelines and still allow landowners to farm efficiently."

He is quick to point out that farmland is not the only source of sediment. Non-point pollutants also come from roads, construction sites, shorelines and mines. "What is important," he stresses, "is that people everywhere recognize that once the soil erodes, there's no getting it back."

Conference set studying innovations govt.

HARRISBURG – The annual Inovations in Local Government was held March 30 at the State Farm Show Building. The conference is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Rural Development Committee, a statewide group geared to improving the quality of life in rural Pennsylvania.

According to Hallowell, the conference included workshops, exhibits and panel discussions on "Key Issues Facing Local Government." Awards were presented to municipalities for their own innovations in local government.

Young Township in Jefferson County and the Ulysses Borough in Potter County received the top honors in this year's competition. The winners, along with eight others receiving honorable mentions, received cash prizes and commemorative plaques.

The Adrian Housing Project in Young Township garnered an award when residents of the former coal mining town worked together and purchased the town from the single landlord who had previously collected rent from all residents.

Ulysses Borough, after a series of town meetings with neighboring communities, renovated a building for a multi-purpose facility for public organizations, providing space for rent to small businesses in an effort to stimulate interest in the downtown area.

Honorable mentions were given to Hartley Township, Union County; Mifflin Township, Columbia County; Orangeville Borough, Columbia County; Petersburg Borough, Huntingdon County; Ridgway Township, Elk County; Seward Borough/St. Clair Township, Westmoreland County; Union Township, Washington County; and Wellsboro Borough, Tioga County.

LEARN SOIL TESTING

And balancing for extremely high yields of high quality crops from a Reams student here at the

ORGANIC CENTER

217 S. Railroad Ave., New Holland, Pa. 17557

717-354-7064 or 394-9917 early mornings for owner.

Learn soil testing in one day, about April 23. Soil seminar for balancing takes 4 days. Will have it probably in July. Ask us for details.

The Reams program with its impressive crops proves that most farmers are over applying potash and under applying phosphorus and calcium to get those yields of 12 ton alfalfa, 100 bu. soybeans, and 300 bu. corn. Soft rock phosphate fills the need. It is high in phosphorus and calcium and low priced in bulk direct from Florida mines by railroad. No blending, no bags, no processing, no reloading. Therefore, it is only $80 per ton dumped in spreader trucks or other trucks. $90 per ton in bags. Higher in smaller quantities. BECAUSE GAS GOES HIGH, FERTILIZER WILL TOO. Therefore read this whole ad and save money. BX SOIL BACTERIA will get free nitrogen out of the air for your crops and improve the efficiency of your fertilizer by requiring only half the fertilizer. Many farmers get equal or better crops with BX alone than with fertilizer. These super prolific bacteria manufacture fertilizer, at leat the soil analysis rises, and they release what is locked up in the soil through chemicals. Nature responds to TLC (tender loving care). Moses wrote that God's laws are for our good. Were there any diseased American crops before smart white man came here?

And untreated rock phosphate lasts in the soil for years. No backing or evaporating No tracking fields every year. What a saving with BX and rock phosphate now that fertilizer price will accelerate. Y don't U try it 2? Then you will know for 1980.

USDA warns of brucellosis hazard

WASHINGTON -- Indicators show the heavy cattle sale of the past couple of years is ending and the cattle industry may be entering a herd rebuilding phase in the marketing cycle, posing risks for cattle buyers.

Cattlemen thinking of rebuilding can use the advice of veterinarian Paul Becton of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. His message could spare them grief and lost profit. "Don't buy brucellosis," said Becton. "One test isn't enough."

Becton is a veteran campaigner against brucellosis and directs brucellosis eradication for the nation from the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. He hopes cattlemen heed his "don't buy" and "one test" slogans.

"The rebuilding period is a dangerous time because cattlemen risk buying infectious diseases along with their cattle purchases. It's crucial now for cattle buyers and sellers as well as their bankers to understand the disease risks. Cattle brucellosis, or Bang's disease, is highly contagious."

The brucella organisms that cause brucellosis live in the cow's udder, certain lymph nodes and in its reproductive tract. They're expelled in enormous quantities when infected cows abort or calve normally. Licking, nuzzling and the herd instinct of cattle help spread the disease rapidly.

Brucellosis can cause 40 per cent fewer calves and 20 percent less milk in a herd. Although APHIS and some state animal health agencies pay owners an indemnity when they slaughter their cattle because of Bang's disease, owners still lose money by reduced calf crops and lower milk yields, he said.

Those losses cost cattle producers about $30.5 million in 1976, said Becton. On-farm control measures cost them $26.7 million more. Also that year, APHIS and state animal health agencies spent $36.8 million and $38.8 million respectively in indemnity and brucellosis control.

A department estimate based on 1976 dollars indicated cattle and dairy losses could reach $850 million annually in just 10 years if federal and state governments stopped fighting the disease. That's unlikely to happen, however, since fighting is extremely cost effective, said Becton.

Humans also can "catch" brucellosis from animals. These cost estimates don't reckon with the costs of human health involvement.

In 1976, 282 human brucellosis cases – known as undulant fever – were reported to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. At least 157 of the victims were packing plant workers and 29 were livestock producers.

"Public health authorities note that some human cases go unreported," said Becton, "Many more simply go undiagnosed." At one time, doctors attributed many human cases to drinking unpasturized milk from infected cows. Today, according to the Center for Disease Control, human brucellosis is mainly an occupational hazzard for livestock handlers and slaughterhouse workers.

The human disease with its debilitating effects is treatable, said Becton. "Anyone who suspects he has it should see a physician."

There's no estimate available on "man years" lost from work because of human brucellosis and no figures on total cost of treating human sufferers. Medical authorities agree, however, that treatment is expensive, involving relatively high doses of antibiotics over a prolonged period.

"The few hundred human cases reported annually nowadays don't begin to compare with the 6,300 reported in 1947," said Becton. "We owe some of this progress to modern milk ordinances and pasteurization. Lowering the infection levels in swine populations helped, but the main progress came from lowering the infection rate in cattle." Today, only about one half of one per cent of U.S. cattle are infected, compared to 4.7 percent just after World War II.

Becton said the problem is that more than 90 per cent of the remaining infection is in 10 states: Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

"Some of these states are making dramatic eradiction progress," he said. "But as long as brucellosis exists, the entire cattle industry is endangered."

In a recent three-month period, half the newly infected herds in one midwestern state were found by retesting cattle held under routine quarantine from higher incidence states. "Every cattle or dairy producer should take that responsibility for himself," Becton said.

"It's best to raise your own replacement animals. But if you can't, be cautious about what you buy. In low-infection areas, buy from known brucellosis-free sellers.

"Buyers in higher-risk areas should buy only animals that were vaccinated for brucellosis as calves and are so identified by ear tattoos, tags and health records.

"Also in higher risk areas, buy replacement stock only from herds that have been completely negative-tested for brucellosis within the past 12 months and which haven't had animals added to the herd since.

"As a final step, higher risk buyers should isolate animals they buy for 60 to 120 days for observation, then have the cattle retested for brucellosis before mixing them with an established herd.

"Following these precautions still won't guarantee cattlemen that they won't get brucellosis in their herds," Becton said. "But they'll be a lot safer than buyers who don't."

"Brucellosis develops faster in some cases than in others," he said. "That's why cattlemen need to retest and take other measures with their animals.

"When abortion is the first sign observed, the minimum incubation period is about 30 days. It takes three weeks to three months – longer in rare cases – for an animal to develop a positive reaction to a blood test.

"So you can see why we say, 'don't buy brucellosis,' and 'one test is not enough.

"It's possible for the disease to spread from a neighboring herd that's infected," said Becton. "But more commonly, the disease is bought and paid for."

at least it will be done right. You'll get better control and your money's worth from your herbicide."

Summary of Penn State Incorporation Study

Moldboard plow — Sutan + — tandem disk harrow.
Even incorporation 4½-5 inches deep.
Weed control: 95 per cent.

Moldboard plow — tandem disk harrow — Sutan + — tandem disk harrow.
Even incorporation up to 3 inches deep. Herbicide incorporation was shallower than in trial 1 because both a moldboard and a disk worked the ground before the herbicide was incorporated.
"I attribute this to looser ground," Hoffman says. "There was more soil movement around each blade and less inversion of soil."
Weed control: 94 per cent.

Moldboard plow — tandem disk harrow — Sutan + — spring tooth harrow.
Incorporation was in spiked pattern. Some herbicide was incorporated down to 6 inches deep where teeth of harrow passed, but most herbicide was incorporated in the top 2½-3 inches between teeth.
Weed control: 96 per cent.

Moldboard plow — tandem disk harrow — herbicide — cultimulcher.
Very even incorporation down to 3½ inches, although 95 percent of the herbicide was placed in the top 2 inches.
Weed control: 97 per cent.

Moldboard plow — Sutan + — Lely Roterra.
Very even incorporation 1½-2 inches deep.
Weed control: 96 per cent.

Chisel plow — Sutan + — heavy offset disk (floating).
Concentrated layer of herbicide placed 5½-6 inches deep with slight spiking effect. Areas between teeth showed very little herbicide. "Results might have been different if depth of heavy disk was controlled with hydraulic lifters," Hoffman says.
Weed control: 72 per cent.

Chisel plow — Sutan + — tandem disk harrow.
Even herbicide incorporation in top 3½-4 inches of soil.
Weed control: 91 per cent.

Chisel plow — Sutan + — Lely Roterra.
Even herbicide incorporation down to 2½-3½ inches deep with spikes of deeper incorporation at 36-inch intervals, corresponding to teeth of chisel plow.
Weed control: 94 per cent.

No plowing — Sutan + — heavy offset disk (floating).
Herbicide applied directly on trash. Little herbicide left on surface; most of herbicide incorporated in top 4 inches of soil but not distributed uniformly.
Weed control: 81 per cent.

No plowing — heavy offset disk — Sutan + — heavy offset disk (floating).
Incorporation was in spiked pattern up to 6 inches deep at 8-inch intervals; spikes about 1½ inches wide; very thin layer of dye at 5-inch depth. As in treatment 2, the herbicide was incorporated shallow because ground was disked before herbicide was incorporated.
Weed control: 93 per cent.

No plowing — heavy offset disk — Sutan + — Lely Roterra.
Even incorporation down to 3½-4 inches.
Weed control: 95 per cent.

No plowing — Sutan + — rain (no-till).
As expected, almost all the herbicide remained on the surface, despite 6-8 inches of rain received in 3½ weeks between application and planting.
Weed control: 18 per cent.

Gasoline rationing plan questioned

WASHINGTON, D.C., — The proposed Federal Contingency Gasoline Rationing Plan does nothing to assure the U.S. farmer that fuel supplies will be available to provide needed farm production inputs, noted a fertilizer industry spokesman this week.

In testimony before both Senate and House subcommittees on energy, Edwin M. Wheeler, president, The Fertilizer Institute, urged that the Administration's plan be amended to allow agriculture to meet the food needs of the nation.

He pointed out that although the plan gives priority for fuel use at the farm, there is no priority given in getting crop production items, such as fertilizer, to the farm – or in getting food items from farm to market.

"Does it make sense to leave gasoline needs for 'essential agricultural uses' up to a white market?" Wheeler asked. Under the currently-proposed plan the movement of "swizzle-sticks" would be as important as movement of essential food production input items, or of food, itself, he noted.

Availability of gasoline supplies for the movement of crop production items is essential to adequate U.S. food and fiber output, Wheeler noted. For example, if fertilizer doesn't arrive on time for Spring plantings, yields will be reduced and consumer food supplies will suffer for both U.S. and export needs.

Gasoline for mass public transportation, sanitation and snow removal services are deemed "priority" under the current plan, Wheeler noted, yet gasoline needs for delivery of fertilizer and other essential food production inputs are left out.

As a bench mark, Wheeler pointed out that, currently, an estimated 211,000,000 gallons of gasoline are needed annually just for delivery of fertilizer from retailer to farm gate. The delivery and use of this fertilizer directly accounts for 30 to 40 per cent of the nation's agricultural output, he noted, which further emphasizes the importance of this segment of fuel use.

China gets ag lift

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A U.S. market development team has reached informal agreement with Chinese officials for several non-profit U.S. agricultural export promotion groups to work with China in modernizing its agriculture, according to Thomas R. Hughes, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS).

Hughes, co-leader of the team, which left China recently after 10 days of talks, said the U.S. groups will assist in the development of baking and feed processing industries and in seeds and grassland management.

The trip was a follow-up of Secretary of Bob Bergland's visit to China last November, during which the Chinese discussed with department officials their broad goals and requirements for agriculture.

Hughes, who accompanied Bergland to China in November, said the Chinese at that time had expressed interest in U.S. market development cooperator program, in which the department works with commodity organizations in a cooperative export effort.

Foster grandparents sought

LANCASTER – Older people who enjoy working with children are being sought to be foster grandparents to disabled or disadvantaged children.

Foster grandparents are employed at day care centers, pediatric units of local hospitals, the S. June Smith Center, Elizabethtown Hospital for Crippled Children and other agencies throughout the city and county.

Each foster grandparent works four hours a day and provides individualized attention to disabled or disadvantaged children. Grandparents use their own characteristics of tenderness and love to help each child. Duties include reading, playing with the children, accompanying them to physical therapy or activities, and providing them with the love and attention they so desperately need. Grandparents will work a total of 20 hours per week and are paid a rate of $2.90 per hour.

In Lancaster County, the Foster Grandparent Program is funded by the Lancaster Employment Training Consortium and administered jointly by the Consortium and the Lancaster County Office of Aging. The purpose of the program is to provide individuals 55 years of age and older with public service employment.

Eligibility for the program is determined by income and length of unemployment. Individuals must be unemployed for the past 10 of 12 weeks. A one-person family must have an income not exceeding $330 per month and a two-person family must have an income not exceeding $539 per month. Any senior citizen interested in the Foster Grandparent Program should contact Kay Rizzuto at the Office of Aging, 50 N. Duke Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania (299-7979).

Ag chemical spokesman praises White House report

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A White House report which critizes the Environmental Protection Agency proposal for dealing with hazardous waste was applauded last week by a spokesman for the agricultural chemicals industry. Dr. Jack D. Early, president of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association (NACA) said, "the report of the Regulatory Analysis Review Group at the White House focuses on excessive government regulation as a key force in escalating inflation to ever-higher levels. The regulatory approach being propsed by EPA under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act is a perfect example of the speed with which a relatively simple act of Congress can be made into a regulatory nightmare."

In a letter to President Carter, Early supported the administration's attempt to come to grips with inflationary pressures, and placed the impact of regulatory zeal among the leading causes. The industry leader noted that the agency has adopted a "worst case" scenario, whereby it is assumed that all wastes are currently being disposed of improperly. "This false assumption," wrote Early, "is used to pave the way for extremely stringent regulations being proposed to correct a situation which is created by the agency itself. ...even some cola drinks could be classified as a hazardous waste, a clear example of excluding any possible exercise of judgment of relative hazard."

Md. Angus breeders meet

WOODBINE, Md. — The Maryland Angus Association held its annual meeting, election and program recently at the Howard County Fairgrounds, West Friendship, Md. The all-day affair included presentation of two awards to Maryland Angus breeders for their outstanding service to the breed.

The 1978 Angus Breeder Of the Year Award was presented to Arthur Houghton, Jr. for the outstanding and invaluable contributions the Wye Angus Herd has made to the improvement of Angus cattle. It was noted that the influence of this herd will be felt for generations. Last year, Houghton donated much of the herd to the University of Maryland.

The second award, 1978 Maryland Angus Family Of The Year, was given to Emmett and Audry Full and their son, Doug, of Back Acres Angus in Mt. Airy, Md. This family has shown leadership and initiative in promotion of the Angus breed and have been instrumental in the establishment of several new Angus herds. They are willing workers and operate a herd of Angus breeding stock and feeder steers for the locker trade. Dr. Full is president of the Maryland Angus Assoc., Mrs. Full is president of the Maryland Women's Angus Club and Doug has just completed a term as president of the Maryland Junior Angus Assoc.

Guest speaker was Louis M. "Mick" Colvin, director of the Certified Angus Beef Program for the American Angus Assoc. in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Colvin explained how beef bearing the stamp "Certified Angus Beef" has met extremely high standards of quality and how that quality is double checked and controlled by U.S.D.A. and Angus Assoc. personnel. He stated that designers of the program had originally feared that the consumer would balk at paying a premium at a time when beef prices were already rising, but, that after talking with people who were purchasing Certified Angus Beef, they found consumers felt that as long as they must pay high prices for beef, they would rather pay a few cents more and be sure they were getting a quality product. Plans are to have the product in the Baltimore-Washington area within the next two years.

Elected president for a second term was Emmett Full, Mt. Airy; vice-president is Ted Ridgely, New Windsor; secretary-treasurer is George Hodges, Fredrick. Dean Considine, Middletown; Wesley Hargett, Boyds; Hank Suchting, Owings Mills; Albert Tabler, Rocky Ridge; and Augie Velisek, Woodbine; were elected for three year terms to the Board of Directors. Dwight Riggleman, Wye Mills, and Warren Streaker, Woodbine, were elected to fill two unexpired terms of directors who had moved from the state. Executive secretary is Caryl Velisek, Woodbine.

Good crops aided by fertilizer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. -- Maryland farmers who produced record and near record size crops last year had a little help from their friends in the chemical industry according to David Clarke, state chemist, for the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

According to Clarke, fertilizer sales for 1978 were the second highest on record totaling some 456,055 tons. Wise usage of fertilizer plus good weather, enabled Maryland farmers to produce the second largest corn crop and the largest soybean crop in the State's history.

"Again," says Mr. Clarke, "the best seller for the period was the 10-10-10 mixture with 53,711 tons followed closely by 10-20-20 with sales of 39,482 tons."

Looking into the future, Mr. Clarke says, "The supply of fertilizer was timely and adequate for the year and with the approach of another energy crisis we feel that industry, as before, will provide our agricultural needs."

In 1978, some 317,901 tons of mixed fertilizers were used. Straight nitrogen materials amounted to 88,395 tons, potash materials accounted for 35,729 tons, phosphate materials for 13,831 and trace elements represented 199 tons.

The leading counties for fertilizer sales, as reported to Mr. Clarke's office were: Queen Annes at 42,668 tons, Carroll at 41,862 tons, Kent at 37,794 tons, Harford at 30,811 tons, Dorchester at 30,251 tons, Frederick at 28,774 tons, Washington at 26,024 tons, Caroline at 20,273 tons and Worcester at 20,145 tons.

Under terms of one of the oldest consumer protection laws in Maryland (with origins in law from the 1840's) all fertilizers sold for use in Maryland must be registered with the State Chemist.

Clarke's office, part of the Maryland Department of Agriculture, in 1978 registered 2,041 fertilizers and performed 6,084 analytical tests on samples to verify the contents of the registered material to make sure it conformed to label guarantees.

Natural grasshopper killer developed

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Environmental Protection Agency has given the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) emergency permission to use a new natural insecticide to combat grasshopper pests on livestock grazing land this year.

EPA approved the new product, which contains microscopic organisms that destroy grasshoppers internally, from May through September 30, 1979 for any part of the country with serious 'hopper infestations. However, because only a limited amount of the compound, which was developed by USDA scientists, is available this year, Agriculture Department specialists will apply it only to about 100,000 acres in northeastern Wyoming.

The new insecticide consists of one-celled protozoans, called Nosema locustae, that occur naturally in a small percentage of grasshoppers. These organisms digest the fat bodies of 'hoppers, eventually killing them.

USDA researchers at Bozeman developed a method for infecting many grasshoppers with the protozoans then processing these diseased bugs into a product.

The protozoans by themselves will not cause an immediate 'hopper kill but will suppress them over a period of several weeks. In its Wyoming program, however, USDA will combine the natural insecticide with the existing chemical pesticide "carbaryl" to provide a quick "knock down" effect. Another portion of the biological product will be mixed with bran bits to form infectious bait.

Introducing Bravo 500, the next generation flowable fungicide that gets early blight, late blight, anthracnose ... and five other major tomato diseases ... before they get your crop.

Bravo fungicide has proven its effectiveness against profit-robbing fungus diseases for almost a decade. That's why it is the choice of tomato growers around the country.

Now Bravo 500 gives you all the crop protection you want to build yields, fruit quality and profits.

Bravo 500 controls all eight major tomato diseases. It clings to leaf surfaces, resists wash-off during rainy spells and irrigation, stops fungus spores from growing. New Bravo 500 is easy to work with, too. It flows readily and disperses quickly and thoroughly in the spray tank.

Only healthy plants can produce optimum yields and quality fruit. Don't wait until disease symptoms appear. Spray early in the growing season with Bravo 500 and spray regularly to prevent diseases from getting started. With Bravo 500 you can spray right up to harvest. No waiting period is required between last application and picking.

Bravo 500 is the best decision you can make to protect your investment in tomato acreage this year.

Bravo 500. Wherever healthy tomatoes are grown, it's the name that keeps cropping up.

'Beefless Wednesday' idea draws fire from Allan Grant

PARK RIDGE, Ill. - "A call for 'beefless Wednesdays' is ill conceived and shows a lack of understanding of the beef marketing system," Allan Grant said here on April 4.

Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was referring to a recommendation by the New York City Department of Consumer Affairs that consumers boycott beef on Wednesdays.

"Such a boycott can disrupt and cripple the beef marketing system and prolong the period of short beef supplies and higher prices for years to come," Grant said.

He explained that higher beef prices serve as a signal to cattlemen to increase production. When production increases, marketplace functions and prices decline.

"It is important that consumers recognize the fact that higher food prices are not the cause of inflation," the farm leader said. "Continued deficit spending by the federal government, which expands the supply of money and credit, is the root cause of inflation," Grant said.

He added that if the public is serious about reducing food prices, it should demand limitations on federal spending and not disrupt the delicate supply and demand balance of the marketplace.

TRW sponsors tractor pullers

CLEVELAND, Ohio - Today's fastest growing motor sport - tractor pulling - is being sponsored by TRW.

Tractor pulling has been around for 50 years and the competition involves moving the furthest down a 300 ft. dirt track with a heavy load (like 60,000 lbs.) on a specially designed sled.

There are four divisions - Super Stocks, Modifieds, Mini-Modifieds, and 4WD Trucks - all in various weight classes. These machines develop many times their factory rated horsepowers, and a 3,000-horsepower output is not uncommon in the Modified Class.

TRW will be the only sponsor of the "Official NTPA Scoreboard," a 40-foot board on a trailer that will appear at each NTPA sponsored pull. Some one milllion enthusiasts attend 40 to 50 NTPA pulls each year, and attendance is growing at the rate of 20 per cent per year.

TRW is also contributing contingency awards for pull winners.

For more information on the sport one can contact: National Tractor Puller's Association, 104 E. Wyandot Avenue, Upper Sandusky, Ohio 43351, 419-294-3819.

Or for information on TRW's Contingency Awards program, one can write TRW Replacement Division, TRW Inc., Dept. DC, 8001 E. Pleasant Valley Road, Cleveland, Ohio 44131.

Penrose Hallowell names Bud Wallis as head of Bureau of Plant Industry

HARRISBURG – Edwin B. (Bud) Wallis, Jr., 52, of Liverpool R1, Perry County, has been appointed as the Director of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Plant Industry by State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell. Wallis assumed his new duties with the Department on March 28.

Hallowell said he was extremely pleased that Wallis had accepted the appointment. He cited Wallis' strong background in agriculture, marketing and government as positive factors in his selection to fill the position.

"Bud has been an active member of the farm-market community for many years," Hallowell said. "In addition, he has demonstrated his desire for public service both through elective office and community service. I am confident that he will do an excellent job in helping this administration improve services to the agricultural sector of our commonwealth."

As Director of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Wallis will be responsible for the administration of programs which are aimed at protecting the state's agriculture from plant pests and plant diseases. The Bureau regulates the sale and content of feeds, fertilizers, soil amendments, lime and seeds. Wallis will also supervise the administration of the Pesticide Control Act of 1974.

Wallis, who graduated from Liverpool High School in 1944, is president and production manager of Edwin Wallis and Sons, Inc., and co-owner of Kline Brothers, Inc., family corporations which produce eggs, broiler chickens and fruit, and process and market eggs.

Since 1971 he has served as County Commissioner for Perry County, four years as Chairman. Wallis has served as the Tri-County Human Service Council president, president of the South Central Commissioners Association, and first vice-president of the SEDA-COG, an 11 county planning unit.

Active in community organizations, Wallis is a member and past president of the Liverpool Lions Club, a member of the Lafayette Masonic Lodge #194, the Perry-Juniata Shrine, the Harrisburg Consistory and Zembo Shrine. He served as Scoutmaster for 18 years, and is currently serving his fifth year as a director of the Commonwealth National Bank of New Bloomfield's Agriloan Board.

He is a director and former secretary of the Pennsylvania State Poultry Federation. A former president and membership chairman of the Perry, County Farmers' Association, Wallis worked actively for 12 years with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association on membership efforts.

A member of the Liverpool Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, Wallis teaches Sunday School.

He is married to the former Twila Klinger. The Wallis' have two daughters, Rebecca and Jill, and a son Craig, and three grandchildren.

Can't Win

One man was recently complaining about that age-old cure for insomnia, counting sheep. "I counted at least 20,000 sheep," he claimed, "I sheared them, combed the wool, had it spun into cloth, made into suits, took some into town,' he continued. "All that took me so long that I haven't slept for at least a week."

WHAT'S NEW

TILLAGE TOOL

DMI, Inc., Goodfield, Illinois has added a new pull-type chisel plow equipped with colters to their Chizl-Champ line - called the "Colter-Champ". According to the manufacturer, this new series features large 24" sharp-edged colters to cut through trash so it can be thoroughly mixed with the soil by the extra high clearance 32" shanks. The colters have tapered cutting edges for longer life and positive cutting. Swinging colters are individually mounted in staggered positions on 15" centers (10" optional) to allow clear channels for trash. All units are available with rigid or spring colters and rigid or spring shanks with 32" rank spacing.

The manufacturer also states that the new DMI Colter-Champs are equipped with an exclusive "A" frame tongue design with all four cross bars attached to the tongue, thus distributing the pulling load evenly to all members. Each unit has a heavy 4"x16" hydraulic lift cylinder with depth stop segments for depth control. This eliminates constant load on the hydraulic system. The tongue length will allow sharp turns even with extra-wide dualed tractors.

Six different Colter-Champ sizes are available which include: 11'3" with 9 shanks; 13'9" with 11 shanks; 15'3" with 13 shanks; 18'9" with 15 shanks; 20'3" with 17 shanks; and 23'9" with 19 shanks. The latter three models have fold-up wings with large 3"x24" hydraulic lift cylinders. These products, according to the manufacturer, are built super rugged and designed to keep the farmer and his farming operation "On-the-Go".

For further information contact: DMI, Inc., Route 150 E., Goodfield, IL 61742, phone 309/965-2233.

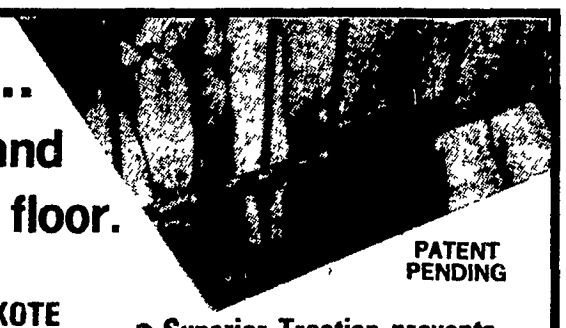
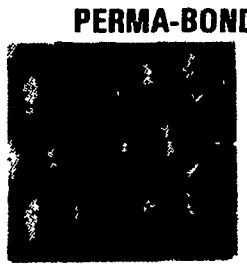
the Tough, Tested and Proven "pig-saver" floor.



PATENT PENDING

PERMA-BOND* KOMFY-KOTE CONSTRUCTION



A tough acid-resistant plastisol compound permanently bonded to a rugged steel mesh

An exclusive bonding process developed by Tenderfoot

- Superior Traction prevents injuries and abrasions.
- Cushioned comfort reduces stress.
- Self-cleaning. No holes or crevices to harbor bacteria.

HOW LONG WILL THEY LAST?

First produced in 1975, Tenderfoot was tested in farrowing pens for 1½ years before being marketed. These original floors have been in constant use ever since WITH NO APPRECIABLE WEAR! Today's Tenderfoot floors have 6 advantages over the original pieces

1. 3 times more coating.
2. Tougher vinyl coating.
3. Extra-strength steel.
4. Treated to resist bacteria & fungi growth.
5. Improved Perma-Bond processing.
6. Strict quality control.

Constant research, development and quality control continues at the Tenderfoot factory and at the nearby 650-sow operation where the original 1975 Tenderfoot floors are still going strong.

How long will a Tenderfoot last? No one knows. The very first ones produced have withstood heavy use since 1975 with no appreciable wear. The floors produced today are 6 ways better than the first ones. On the basis of these facts it seems safe to say that any concern over the durability of Tenderfoot flooring is unnecessary.

ECONOMY POWERKING sets a fast pace on tough jobs

Md. broiler industry hits 9 million mark

ANNAPOLIS, Md. – State Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., says all Maryland agriculture can take pride in the latest milestone reached by the Delmarva broiler industry: the placement of nine million chicks in one week.

"Figures supplied me by the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service, a cooperating agency with MDA, show that during the week ending March 24, some 9,080,000 chicks were placed for grow out," Mr. Crawley said.

"This is another milestone for the broiler industry, which afterall, traces its origins to Delmarva. Not only does it mean a robust production level for the industry itself, it means good things for other segments of agriculture as well.

"Grain farmers especially can smile when they do a little calculating and realize that over the eight to eight and one-half week grow out period for nine million chickens, those birds will eat about 45,000,000 pounds (803,000 bushels) of corn and upwards of 18,000,000 pounds (300,000 bushels) of soybeans.

"Economic benefits also flow to workers in the service businesses utilized by the broiler industry, there is more work for people in the processing plants and a demand for more packaging materials, just to mention a few of the direct beneficiaries.

"The consumer also benefits because high production by the broiler industry means stable, and believe it or not, even lower prices at the check out counter for chicken.

Poultry products show no radiation

HARRISBURG – At the request of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, poultry products have been monitored and sampled even though government officials did not think it was necessary. The Food and Drug Administration and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture sampled poultry products in stores, farms, and processing plants. All were negative for radiation contamination.

Poultry products are the least susceptible agricultural products to radiation due to their closed environment housing and closed feeding systems, says the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation.

Some 32 food commodities were examined by FDA including apple pie, doughnuts, spaghetti, chocolate wafers, etc., and all were negative.

Several poultry and egg processing plants did sampling on their own at private laboratories and all samples were negative.

Milk is the most susceptible product to radiation contamination. That is why it was constantly being monitored. Even so, milk is safe and only a few samples showed radiation iodine present. Levels were so low that consumers need not be concerned. All agricultural commodities are safe beyond a reasonable doubt.

Outreach means life itself to millions

By JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

NEW WINDSOR, Md. – "Programs of compassion" they call them. And to some of the millions of homeless, injured and needy around the world, the outreach that begins at a small campus here has literally meant life itself.

The Brethren Service Center at New Windsor sits atop a knoll at the edge of the quiet town, overlooking the rich soils and well-tended farms of Carroll County. Through the efforts of a dedicated staff of 125, and devoted volunteers who come to help for a day or a year, aid pours out from the interdenominational efforts of Church World Service (CWS).

Founded in 1848 as a Catholic College, the Center's history includes a period as a men's prep school, a Presbyterian co-ed college and later use as a Brethren liberal arts facility.

In 1944, a far-sighted layman envisioned the potential of the campus and the property was purchased for $34,400. As the needs have grown, so have the compassionate programs of the Service Center, based on the philosophy of the major peace churches, the Brethrens, Mennonites and Quakers.

As a headquarters for Church World Service programs, the outreach deals with emergency disaster aid, health assistance and long-term self-improvement technology, much of it in the area of basic agriculture.

One major thrust is through the "heifer project," established as an alternative to sending powdered milk to hungry families. Recipients of a gift heifer must, in turn, pass on the animal's first female offspring to another needy family.

"We've had 10,000 sea-going cowboys through this effort," proudly relates guide Blanche Geesaman, a current resident-volunteer whose home is in Lebanon County, Pa.

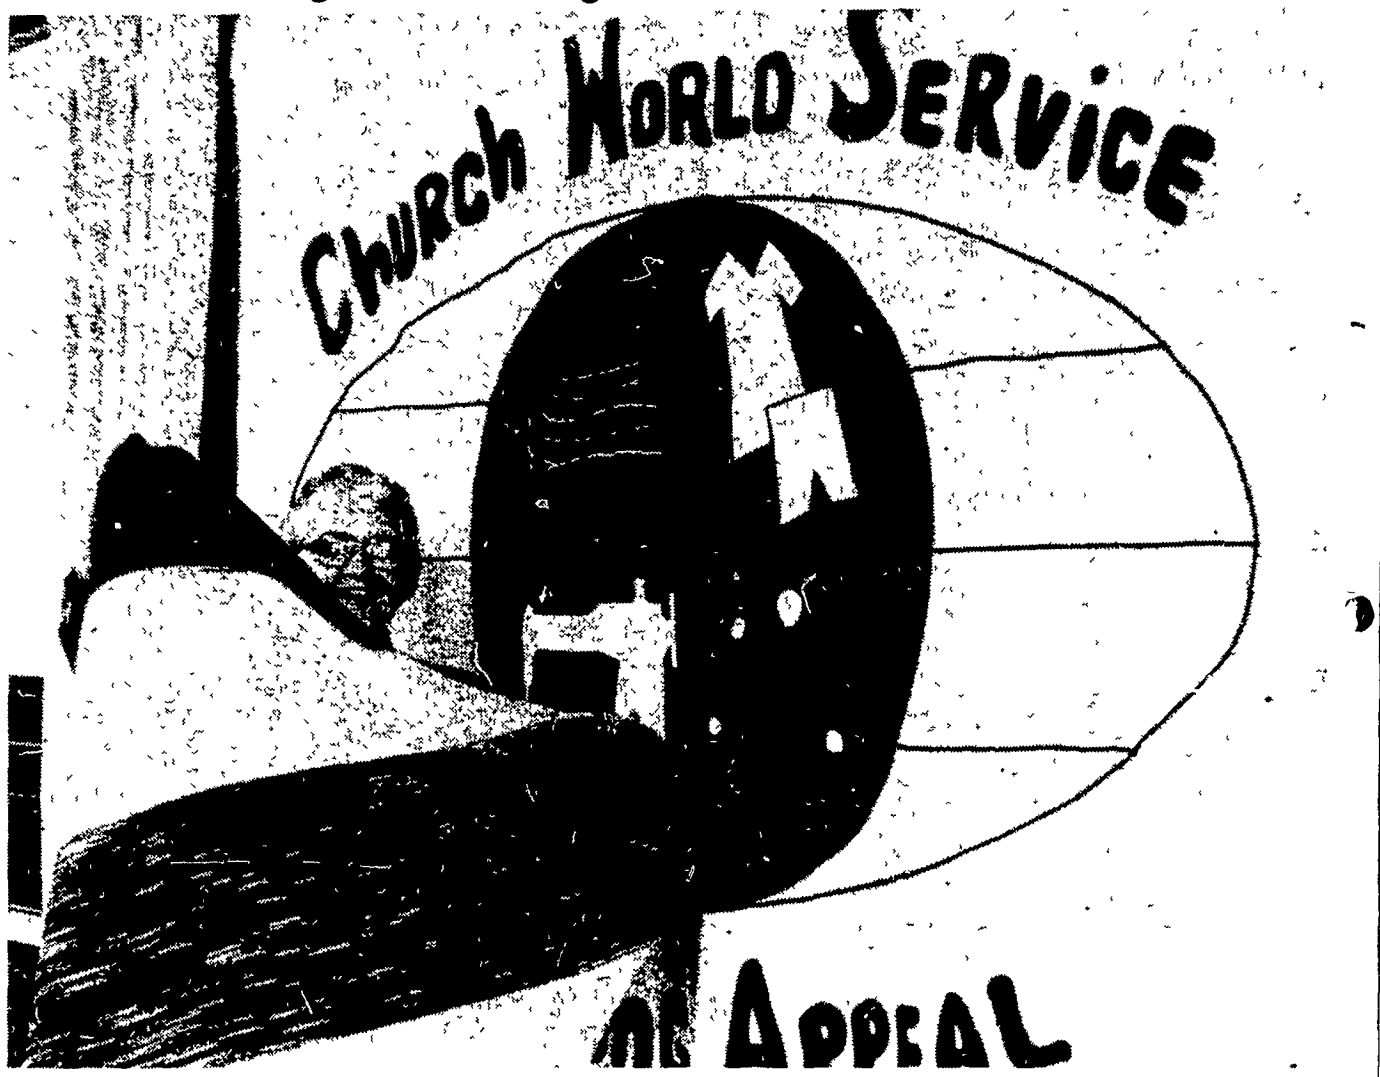
National headquarters for the heifer program was housed at New Windsor for a period of time. A regional branch of the present headquarters at Little Rock, Ark., will be established here soon to help coordinate this farmer-to-farmer sharing. In addition to the meat and milk heifers sent, shipments of other basic farm breeding stock include sheep, swine and rabbits.

CROP, (the Christian Rural Overseas Program), is another agriculture program. With funds and commodities raised by individuals and church groups in nationwide drives, CROP provides cash gifts for seeds, tools, tractors, wells and windmills to subsistence farmers.

Even ladybugs have been sent as a tool of self-help to some tropical countries. They're used in areas where aphids, a ladybug's favorite food, destroy the date palm trees, a major source of some food staples.

Through the phenomenal growth of medical assistance needs, a huge new packing warehouse has been built to house drug and food stocks. Established in 1961, the Inter-Church Medical Assistance (IMA) handles tons of drugs, health supplies, contraceptives, dental needs, physical therapy equipment and hospital beds, some donated by private manufacturers or government programs and others purchased at reduced cost.

Shipments depart frequently by tractor-trailer from the Center to deep-water harbors at Baltimore and New York, or to New Orleans for South American destinations. Workers at New Windsor pack the cargo in large metal barrels, with the tops welded shut, both to deter theft of the contents of the vital shipments and so that female missionaries can roll the heavy containers into their jeeps.



Mary Little, a secretary of CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program) displays a "Remsen baby blanket" a pattern especially designed by a volunteer for an easily-constructed infant wrap. Hundreds of these warm scrap-yarn creations have been sent to families worldwide.

A simple four dollar blanket, purchased with the funds of Church World Service, is representative of the massive disaster aid program.

When Guatemala was struck by a severe earthquake, 26,000 of the dark gray, 80-per cent wool, 20-per cent synthetic blankets were among the disaster needs rushed to the Central American country. A blanket, guides quickly point out, can serve as a warm wrap, a tent or shelter, or a means of carrying meager possessions to a refugee center.

When last year's devastating flood ripped through Johnstown, Pa., 2000 blankets went with clean-up volunteers, along with truckloads of water purification tablets, dehydrated food and clothing supplies. Staffers stress that the aid works, not in conflict, but in close contact, with the efforts of the International Red Cross.

Other blankets made by volunteers using scraps of materials arrive almost daily at the center. One 94-year-old Lancaster County gentlemen is fondly remembered as staff members recall how he has sewn 1200 quilt tops for CWS.

Yarn is another precious commodity of warmth and comfort; and countless miles of it has been knitted and crocheted into soft infant garments by volunteers who work love through their hand stitching. Thousands of "Remsen baby blankets," a yard-square simple design named for the volunteer who created the pattern, have swaddled newborns in third-world countries.

Infant outreach also includes the "layette kits," pre-cut and packaged at New Windsor for volunteers to purchase and sew for the mission outreach. The promise of a layette and soft blanket for their babies has brought many pregnant women, otherwise not receiving pre-natal care, to the CWS clinics.

Included in the layettes are tummy bands, which keep the newborn's umbilical area clean and dry until healed, and are credited with having saved many infants from death resulting from cord infection.

Although these programs are international in scope, they still begin with simple basics.

Little things like a health kit, with its towel, washcloth, bar of soap, toothpaste, toothbrush, and comb can offer a lift of self-esteem to someone with no access to those grooming necessities most of us take for granted.

Children, who might not otherwise ever learn to write, print their first letters on a tablet found in a CWS school kit, with the shiny new pencils and cheery crayons packed beside it.

Women in Ghana, where a husband might earn a dollar a day, and a spool of thread costs ninety cents, learn to sew and better their families income with a sewing kit of needles, thread and a two-yard length of cotton fabric.

One especially unique program is provided by SERRV, the Sales Exchange for Refugee Rehabilitation Vocations.

SERRV is another self-help project. It provides a non-profit marketplace for handcrafts made in poverty-stricken areas, and returns a high percentage of the crafts' retail prices to the individual creators.

These high-quality handcrafted gifts are sold at New Windsor's gift shop and by mail-order catalog. Their beauty, excellent craftsmanship and incredibly low prices have made the Center's gift shop a must for every visitor. It's also a favorite spot for holiday gift buyers who annually flock into New Windsor for the several weeks preceeding Christmas.

Thousands, of all races and creeds, have found a haven of peace and hope in the historic buildings and stately trees of the New Windsor Brethren Service Center. Refugees, like those who fled from Vietnam and more recent ones from Ethiopia, find friendship, a temporary home and assistance in finding sponsors to start a new life in the United States.

A variety of organizations, church, agriculture and civic, use the center's facility for conferences and meetings. Tours of the campus are available. Information on the program and needs of the Church World Service programs, as well as patterns for a variety of items needed in the mission fields, may be obtained by contacting the Brethren Service Center, P. O. Box 188, New Windsor, MD. 21776.

Order No. 4 Class 1 milk price set

ALEXANDRIA, Va. - Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine has announced a Class I milk price of $13.37 per hundredweight for May 1979. This price is up seven cents from April and $1.50 higher than the May 1978 Class I milk price.

Order No. 4 prices are announced for milk testing 3.5 per cent butterfat, f.o.b. plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia, and also within 75 miles from the nearer of Washington, D.C. or Baltimore, Md. There is also a six-cent direct-delivery differential applicable to producer milk received at plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia.

Mr. Shine announced a Class II milk price of $10.56 per hundredweight for March 1979 and a butterfat differential of 13.1 cents for the month. The Class II milk price is unchanged from the previous month while the butterfat differential increased .3 cents from February.

These class prices are based on the March 1979 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $10.59 per hundredweight adjusted to a 3.5 per cent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for March was $1.1408 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.7546 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

Holstein Assn. appoints director of research

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. - Dr. Lynn P. Johnson, has accepted a position as director of research for the Holstein Association of America, effective July 1, according to Zane Akins, Association executive secretary.

Johnson brings a background of research and practical experience in genetics, statistics and computer sciences. Since 1975, he has been engaged in dairy cattle breeding research at University of Guelph, Ontario, Canada, and at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

In his new position for the national breed organization, Johnson will concentrate on the development of advanced technology relating to improved genetic evaluation procedures from performance data on sires, cows, and pedigrees. He will develop best linear unbiased prediction (BLUP) procedures for PDT computation at the Holstein Association in cooperation with U.S. Department of Agriculture research scientists.

Association Executive Secretary Akins said he will analyze and develop genetic evaluation methodology from the cooperative Holstein Association/NAAB project on linearized descriptive type trait evaluation.

While at the University of Guelph, the new type evaluation system (BLUP) for the Canadian Holstein Association was developed and Johnson was directly involved with the national sire evaluation program for production traits.

Energy-use efficiency improved by fertilizer producers

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Major U.S. fertilizer producers improved energy-use efficiency by 1.5 percentage points during the last six months of 1978, for a 13.5 per cent improvement over 1972 base year figures, according to The Fertilizer Institute. A report on the data, submitted to the U.S Department of Energy, is filed each year by the Institute on behalf of industry.

Eight major fertilizer corporations participate in the semi-annual survey, as mandated by Congress. In addition, eight other producers supply data on a voluntary basis. The 1978 gain, while representing an increase in efficiency, falls slightly short of the government's voluntary goal of a 14.1 per cent increase by 1980 for the chemical sector as a whole.

The efficiency gained, when applied to overall production of fertilizer, amounts to approximately 29 trillion BTU's saved in the past year alone, said an industry spokesman

"To equate BTU savings with barrels of oil, the industry has saved about five million barrels in the past year. That is, we would have consumed five million more barrels this year if our energy efficiency levels had remained the same as those in 1972," said TFI President Edwin M. Wheeler in explaining the report.

In a supplement which TFI filed with the 1978 report, companies listed a number of energy-saving practices, including installation of more energy-efficient equipment, computers, as well as recovery and re-use of used gases and waste steam.

The DOE report includes manufacturers of nitrogen, phosphate, and mixed fertilizers and is based on a comparison of energy use per unit of product for July-December 1978 with energy use per unit of product in 1972, the year before OPEC was formed. Calculations, prescribed by DOE, exclude energy used for feedstock and for certain operatoinal changes, such as energy used in order to comply with Environmental Protection Agency regulations.

SCS to begin evaluation

LANCASTER - The U.S Soil Conservation Service began work on Phase IV of the Chickies Creek Watershed project during the first week of April, according to SCS District Conservationist for Lancaster County, Warren Archibald.

Phase IV involves the evaluation of the various flood damage reduction alternatives that were identified during a previous planning phase. This portion of the study is scheduled to be completed in October, 1979.

The local sponsors of the Chickies Creek Watershed project include the Lancaster County Commissioners, the Borough of Manheim, and Lancaster Conservation District. They will use this data to select the plan that will be installed to control flooding and protect the soil and water resources of the watershed. The total plan is scheduled for completion in November, 1980.

Rains spur arrival of plant diseases

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – Rainy weather in early April appears to be triggering a pattern of fungus infection in Mid-Atlantic area home and commercial fruit orchards that is reminiscent of five years ago.

This word comes from Dr. Leslie O. Weaver, Extension plant pathologist and professor of botany at the University of Maryland at College Park. Dr. Weaver reports that mature spores from the overwintering stage of apple scab fungus were found April 1, on trees at Hancock (Washington County), in western Maryland's commercial apple-growing area.

Since rain fell on several successive days after this discovery, the three major requirements for spreading the infection have been met. These requirements are:

Mature ascospores from scab-infected leaves of the previous year; Green leaves exposed from current-season buds; and sufficient hours of wetting for infection to occur.

Delayed dormant oil sprays containing a fungicide would have protected the emerging small green leaves if applied before the rainy spell started, Dr. Weaver commented.

But if you are among the many who didn't get their dormant spray applied this year, get set for an eradicant spray schedule which calls for applications every six to eight days between now and the end of May.

Such regular spraying is important both to insure scab-free fruit from this year's crop and to protect the new buds which will bloom and produce fruit next year.

If apple scab was present on your trees last year – or in nearby orchards – pre-bloom sprays should contain an eradicant fungicide like dodine (Cyprex) or benomyl (Benlate), either alone or in combination with a protectant such as captan.

If scab infection did occur in your apple trees that rainy first week in April, you can expect the characteristic leaf spots to start showing up in mid-April.

For more information, contact your county Extension agricultural science or horticulture agents. County Extension offices in Maryland will have the following free publications, as appropriate:

Spray Schedules for Commercial Tree Fruit Growers (Maryland Extension Bulletin 134)

Sprays for Home Fruit Plantings (Maryland-Delaware Extension Bulletin 125).

If a similar rainy pattern occurs in early May, disease problems with ornamental shrubs are also apt to appear, the Maryland Extension plant pathologist warns. To be prepared for such emergencies, ask your County Extension office for a free one-page leaflet titled Disease Control of Ornamentals (Plant Pathology Mimeo No. 12 – revised 4/75).

Some additional comments on this year's rainy spring have been provided by Dr. Orman E. Street, acting climatologist in Maryland for the National Weather Service of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Dr. Street noted that rainfall so far in 1979 ranges from near normal in western Maryland to moderately above normal in central Maryland and excessively above normal on the Eastern Shore.

So this situation may be a precursor to comparative degrees of plant disease problems that may occur across the state in the next month or so.

The meeting will be held on Monday, April 16, 7:30 p.m. at the Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport R1, according to Paul H. Keeney, Chairman of the Berks County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

The office will be open from 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday, April 16, to take applications for the Set-aside program.

WHAT'S NEW

VACUUM SYSTEM

The De Laval Separator Company has introduced the latest addition to it's family of vacuum systems. Technically referred to as a Water Ring Vacuum Supplier, it is designed for dairymen with high operating requirements and heavy demands for dependable, efficient power.

The unit consists of a cylindrical housing in which a vane-type impeller revolves at high speed (1750 RPM) on a rotating shaft which is off-center to the inner surface of the housing. The incoming water supply is propelled into a ring, and the vanes of the rotor divide that water ring into V-shaped cells. The volume of water in each cell changes as the rotor turns, creating a piston-like action that sucks and discharges air through the pump. The rotating impeller is the only moving part of the Vacuum Supplier.

Available in 10, 15 or 25 horsepower direct-drive models, or a 40 horsepower belt-driven version, this new Vacuum Supplier has come to be known as the "Gentle Giant", because it is gentle and quiet operating, while handling heavy-duty demands for power.

For more information write to: The De Laval Separator Company, 4735 Belleview, Kansas City, Mo. 64112.

Milk promotion discussed at ADA meeting

By JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

GLEN ROCK – Some dairyman still argue that promotion checkoffs are a waste of money. John Krone, Glen Rock R2, isn't one of them.

Krone is the Federal Order 2, District 18 Director of the American Dairy Association. He and his wife Ada represented the district's dairy farmers at the 19th annual meeting of ADA and Dairy Council of New York, held last month at the Hotel Syracuse in Syracuse, N.Y.

Also attending from the area were E. Wayne Beshore, New Cumberland, representing York County's independent dairy shippers, and Richard Norton, manager of Atlantic Dairy Council, headquartered in Baltimore.

"American Dairy Association is thinking promotion funds in terms of one per cent of the milk price per hundredweight, or roughly ten cents," says Krone. "If that sounds high, remember that in 1966 we talked promotion budgets with about three cents per hundred on $3.60 milk. The cost of promotion has drastically increased since then, but the funding hasn't kept pace."

Charles Haag, publisher of Restaurant Business Magazine, was one of the key speakers at the March 5 and 6, Syracuse meeting. He focused on the growing numbers of Americans eating out and the need for the dairy industry to focus in on this eat-on-the-run movement. Noting that the food service industry has been growing progressively faster than that of supermarkets, Haag cited figures that show one out of every two food dollars now being spent at fast food outlets.

"Consumer products must be the right product at the right place at the right time at the right place in the right package," Haag told the dairy industry representatives.

As proof that dairy products are often slighted in restaurant ordering, Haag detailed one promotion program where restaurant milk sales jumped 25 per cent "just by having waitresses offer milk as a meal beverage."

When that promotion thrust ended, milk sales leveled off at 11 percent higher than before the dairy product push. There was also a 46 per cent increase of large glass orders over small glass orders in the same campaign.

Larry Oliver, a senior sales manager of dairy products for the A & P supermarket chain, stressed the need for better dairy products handling training by retail store personnel.

After holding ADA-staffed training seminars for A & P's store personnel, sales were increased ten per cent in a 90-day period.

In the New Orleans marketing area, retail dairy sales increased 80 to 160 thousand gallons weekly within a ten-week period, with total sales increasing five per cent. Dairy sales were expected to reach as high as 15 per cent of the total store sales, while prior to the in-store training, they ranged at near 3.4 per cent.

Other speakers for the dairy meeting were James P. Camerlo, president of Rocky Mountain Empire Dairymen's Association and an officer of UDIA, and Dan Rowles, UDIA's Eastern regional manager.

Camerlo, a dairy producer with an 800-cow herd, detailed his organization's uses and results of a 13.5 cent per hundredweight promotion checkoff. Rowles briefed dairymen and promotion specialists on the new advertising programs and materials.

Robert Turner chaired the ADA-Dairy Council meeting.

He stressed the importance of dairy cooperatives and other farm groups in the marketing of milk and of the increased costs of promotion.

Energy project funded

WASHINGTON – The Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) has approved a loan guarantee to Midwest Solvents, Inc., Atchinson, Kan., to finance a pilot project to convert milo and sugarcane molasses into alcohol.

The action is the fourth and final loan guarantee approved under legislation that provides for loan guarantees of up to $15 million for a maximum of four pilot energy projects, said Weldon Barton, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Office of Energy.

Midwest Solvents requested a loan guarantee of $15 million for their proposal to develop an alcohol distillery using fermentation technology. The project would study and develop the capability to use sweet sorghum as an alternative feedstock, in collaboration with the sweet sorghum research and field testing program at nearby Weslaco, Texas.

The three projects approved earlier include research to convert sugar cane residues to alcohols for fuel use; refine forest and agricultural residues into fuel pellets for direct burning in industrial boilers; and convert forest residues into gas, oil and charcoal for fuel and other uses.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said at the CCC meeting today he has directed the Office of Energy to coordinate an overall appraisal of the alcohol fuel situation by early April.

Manual on 'Street Trees' available

UNIVERSITY PARK – If you're working on tree beautification programs in urban areas, there's a Penn State manual that may be helpful – "Street Trees." This guide to selecting and planting urban trees was developed by Dr. Roland R. Daniels of the Department of Horticulture at University Park.

"This manual has been developed for use by shade tree commissions and professional horticultural firms planning and carrying out tree planting and maintenance," Dr. Daniels stated.

Topics include site and variety selection, site preparation, planting, and care and maintenance following planting. Included in an appendix are (1) a checklist of current street plantings and analysis of potential planting sites; (2) proposed specifications for selecting, planting, and maintenance of street trees within developments; (3) general specifications for deciduous shade and flowering trees; (4) standards of workmanship for tree care and maintenance; and (5) suggested contract specifications for establishing and maintaining street plantings.

Two other features are a tree hardiness zone map of Pennsylvania and an outline of characteristics for trees suitable for planting in the Commonwealth.

The manual may be purchased for $2.12, tax included, from STREET TREES, Box 6000, University Park, Pa., 16802. Make checks or money orders payable to The Pennsylvania State University. Allow at least two weeks for delivery.

Typical of comments regarding the manual is this statement from a teacher in Canada: "Your publication is a significant contribution to the popular literature describing aesthetic horticulture and urban forestry tree selection and maintenance. It should have wide application throughout northeastern North America."
